New Cold Wave Brings Death, Suffering To Nation

DEATH TOLL REACHES 142 UP TO DATE

Temperatures Still Below Normal in Practically All Parts of Country

Fishing Tug on Lake Michigan With Three Men Aboard Still Missing

By UNITED PRESS
ANOTHER cold wave, sending temperatures back to sub-zero levels, moved southward Thursday out of the Arctic.

A short respite between the new storm and the season's most severe cold wave was indicated by U. S. government forecasts. The second high pressure area was preceded by snow in Canada.

Temperatures rose slightly from the Appalachian to the Rocky mountains, bringing some relief from the storm which caused at least 142 deaths. Hundreds of others were injured in accidents caused by the snow and ice.

The Pacific northwest, with 24 deaths caused by the storm and floods, and the New England region, which reported 18 deaths due to the storm, suffered the most severely.

United Press reports from other sections revealed 15 dead in Wisconsin, 21 in Illinois, 19 in Indiana, 8 in Michigan, 7 in Iowa, 12 in Minnesota and the Dakotas, 11 in Pennsylvania, 4 in New York, 4 in Massachusetts, 6 in Ohio and one each in Connecticut, Oklahoma and Washington, D. C.

Temperatures still were below normal in all sections of the United States with the exception of extreme southern states. North of Duluth, Minn., the temperature was rising after falling to 47 degrees below zero. A low of 23 degrees below was recorded at St. Paul.

The fishing tug Scagull with three men aboard was missing today on Lake Michigan. Chicago coastguard headquarters was conducting a search along the western shore of the lake. On the eastern shore coast guardsmen searched for the bodies of eight men who drowned when two fishing tugs foundered Tuesday night.

MILLIONS PAID BY BANKS AS PREMIUM

WASHINGTON, Dec. 28.—(UP)—Millions of dollars in assessments from thousands of banks today were pouring into the government's gigantic insurance pool under which most of the country's bank depositors will have their money insured up to $2500 beginning Tuesday.

From present indications less than a thousand of the country's operating 14,500 banks will not have their deposits insured in this manner at the first of the year and most of these are expected to be brought in shortly afterward. Participating banks are paying in one-quarter of one percent of their insurable deposits immediately and an additional payment of a like amount is due on call. The largest payment reported so far is from the Bank of America amounting to $860,000.

BELGIUM SIDES WITH ENGLAND ON DISARMING

Favors Limited German Re-armament Thus Creating New Crisis

PARIS, Dec. 28.—(UP)—Diplomatic reports that Belgium, France's staunch ally, favored limited German rearmament coincided today with signs that a crisis was impending in European disarmament negotiations.

Paul Hymans, Belgian foreign minister, conferred yesterday with Joseph Paul-Boncour, French foreign minister. It had been taken for granted that, with Belgium sharing France's anxiety at the Nazi government's activities in Germany, Hymans and Paul-Boncour would agree in detail on a program.

But reports today were that Hymans supported the British idea that, as no other nation is disarming, Germany as a matter of national pride should be permitted a strictly limited program of rearmament, perhaps to include more soldiers as well as "sample" quotas of armaments.

Confirmation of this report would mean that France was further isolated at a moment when its cabinet was despairing of the success of direct negotiations with Germany and was considering informing Chancellor Adolf Hitler that any proposals he might advance must be submitted through League of Nations machinery. In this case the whole disarmament commission, which has almost as many plans as members.

The approach of a crisis in disarmament negotiations was indicated by a maze of communiques, reports, denials and diplomatic trial balloons today.

The United Press learned authoritatively that in hope of preventing a break that might lead Germany to rearm in defiance of the World War allies, France was studying the idea of drafting a new disarmament plan. It would be submitted to the disarmament conference at Geneva next month.

The plan under study would envisage certain reductions in army, naval and air armaments.

Such a plan would involve informing Germany that direct negotiations were impossible because the plan must be submitted to all powers at once.

NO CHANGES MADE IN PRICE OF GOLD

WASHINGTON, Dec. 28.—(UP)—Despite further strength in the American dollar in foreign markets, the federal government held its domestic gold buying price unchanged at $34.68 an ounce today for the eighth successive business day.

The price was $1.97 above the world price set in London today at 126 shillings 3 pence, or 2 pence from yesterday. Based on the opening exchange rate for the pound sterling ($3.10), this was equal to $12.09 an ounce.

The dollar remained at 60.63 cents.

TWENTY BANKS DEFENDANTS IN FEDERAL SUIT

Government Moves in Suit to Force Payments to 11,000 Depositors

NEW YORK, Dec. 28.—(UP)—The federal government moved today in a suit without legal precedent to force the 20 member banks of the New York Clearing House association to repay in full the claims of thousands of depositors of the defunct Harriman National Bank and Trust company.

Government representatives filed an equity suit in supreme court demanding that the defendants—members of the association and bankers forming its governing committee—make good on their written promises to meet the claims of the Harriman bank's 11,000 depositors, estimated to total $9,375,000.

The action climaxed a nine-month attempt to persuade members to make these payments, in accordance with guarantees made by the clearing house committee during the critical period of 1932 and early 1933. At that time the committee arranged with the controller of the currency to keep the Harriman from closing to avoid a city-wide banking crisis.

Preliminary discussions between the government and clearing house members resulted in 15 of the members indicating a willingness to accept the results of arbitration. Five members demurred, insisting on court determination of liability.

The government previously indicted Joseph W. Harriman, former president, on charges of falsifying records and misapplying certain of the bank's funds. He is to be brought in federal court on Jan. 5 for resumption of a sanity hearing.

BUSINESS WILL IMPROVE NEXT YEAR, BELIEVED

Steady Acceleration of Industry in 1934 Forecast by Leaders

(Copyright, 1933, by the United Press)

NEW YORK, Dec. 28.—(UP)—American business leaders are looking for steady improvement in acceleration of industry in 1934, a United Press survey showed today. Forecasts generally are for greater employment and improved earnings.

There was unanimity of belief that the pick-up started in 1933 would be continued, but various industries have different viewpoints on the rate of improvement expected during the year. A cross section of the opinions showed:

Alfred P. Sloan, Jr., president of General Motors corporation—We are better off on practically all counts than we were a year ago. . . . We must appreciate that such a trend, having definitely manifested itself, is bound to gain momentum as time passes.

Gerard Swope, president of General Electric company—We are looking forward with confidence that 1934 will be a better year than in 1933 in employment and in industry.

Steady Market
George A. Sloan, president Cotton-Textile Institute—Application of self regulating powers promises a more stabilized market and employment situation in 1934 than has been experienced by the industry for the past four or five years.

C. M. Chester, president General Foods corporation—With more widespread employment and purchasing power, the food business as a whole should be able to make progress.

O. C. Huffman, president Continental Can company, Inc.—Present prospects for the can making industry next year are bright.

Thomas J. Watson, president International Business Machines corporation—I am convinced that 1934 will witness an acceleration of the improvement now taking place here and in other important commercial nations.

F. A. Merrick, president Westinghouse Electric and Manufacturing company—The outlook for 1934 is definitely in the direction of improvement.

Real Progress
Edward G. Seubert, president Standard Oil Company of Indiana—I am hopeful of seeing real progress in recovery in 1934.

W. R. Boyd, Jr., executive vice president American Petroleum Institute—The end of 1933 and the dawn of 1934 finds the oil situation in an improved position and that improvement should be progressive.

Thomas A. Buckner, president of the New York Life Insurance company—I look forward to 1934 with confidence.

Joseph Wilshire, president Standard Brands, Inc.—While I see nothing spectacular in the horizon, I feel the outlook is for a steady gain in business in which, even if

Planning To Stay Aloft Indefinitely

"Outdoor Girl" Will Exceed Present Mark at 6 o'Clock Tonight

BULLETIN

MIAMI, Fla., Dec. 28.—(UP)—Helen Richey and Frances Harrell equalled the women's endurance flight record of 196 hours and five minutes in their monoplane, "Outdoor Girl," at 5:08 p. m., E. S. T., here today.

BULLETIN

MIAMI, Fla., Dec. 28.—(UP)—As Frances Harrell and Helen Richey completed their eighth day in the air here today, there came indications that all aboard their endurance monoplane "Outdoor Girl" was not well, and the possibility they might land tonight.

MIAMI, Fla., Dec. 28.—(UP)—Two intrepid girl fliers, who have been aloft in their monoplane, "The Outdoor Girl" for eight days, flew confidently toward a new endurance record for women here today.

"Thanks, it's up to the motor now," messaged Mrs. Frances Harrell and Miss Helen Richey after the day's refueling was completed. "Both feeling great."

Officials of the international aeronautical association informed the women that they would reach the present record, 196 hours and five minutes, at 5:08 p. m. E. S. T. today, and that if they were still aloft one hour later, the new record would be theirs. They took off at 1:03 p. m. Dec. 20.

For the moment the fliers were concentrating on breaking the record, communicating but little with the ground crew. Once the record is theirs, they said, "we'll settle down for some real endurance flying," and will drop more notes advising of their progress.

There were several offers to capitalize on the publicity of the flight.

MASS PLANE FLIGHT IS GIVEN APPROVAL

SAN DIEGO, Cal., Dec. 28.—(UP)—The last apparent obstacle in the path of a projected flight of six naval planes from San Francisco to Honolulu was removed today by final approval of plans in Washington.

The chief of naval operations instructed 11th naval district headquarters here to proceed with plans for the air squadron VB-10 to take off about the middle of January in the trans-Pacific hop.

The flight will be directed by Commander Kneller McGinniss who led the squadron from Coco Solo, Panama, to San Diego in a one-stop flight in October. McGinniss was given permission to set a definite date for the takeoff.

Hold Conference In North On H. B. Tideland Wells

SAN FRANCISCO, Dec. 28.—(UP)—Representatives of the Huntington Beach oil industry met here today to discuss phases of a $1,000,000 annual royalty which Rolland Vandegrift, state director of finance, proposes be paid to the state.

All of the operators whose wells are producing from the state-owned tideland have agreed to accept the royalty schedule offered by Vandegrift. It is understood, The royalties range from five per cent up to 60 per cent, depending upon the gravity of the oil and the output of the wells.

The oil men and state representatives have been holding numerous conferences in Los Angeles for the past several weeks.

ADMIRAL BYRD'S FLAGSHIP SURROUNDED BY ICEBERGS; ENGINES SLOWED BY LEAKS

ON BOARD S. S. JACOB RUPPERT ENROUTE TO ANTARCTICA, Dec. 28.—(Via Mackay Radio) —(UP)—(Delayed)—Surrounded by icebergs, blinded by fog and with its engines slowed by leakage of water into its fuel oil, Admiral Richard E. Byrd's flagship was feeling its way tonight.

A northwest gale was blowing. Visibility has not been more than three miles for four days. New bergs meet every movement of the ship.

The ship is being steered by dead reckoning, and for nearly two hours today it drifted all but helplessly on a stormy sea with scores of icebergs around it.

An idea of the problems posed by the icebergs is given by an experience as the ship moved slowly eastward.

"Iceberg off the starboard bow," shouted one officer.

"Iceberg off the port bow," cried a second.

"It's the same berg," shouted the first.

It was half a mile long and stuck 100 feet out of the water.

There was an acute situation today when two enormous icebergs loomed 200 feet high, one off the starboard bow, the other off the port bow. It was decided to take the ship around them, as it was feared an attempt to pass between them might endanger it.

Just then the engine room reported that water had leaked into the oil and steam pressure was dropping fast. The oil and water, pumped to the burner nozzles, had extinguished the fires. It took time to raise steam again and the ship lost speed rapidly.

The captain yelled for more speed and was told that the engine room was doing its best.

"We have got to have more," the captain said. "We are in dangerous waters."

The two big bergs were less than 200 yards off and there were 50 small ones nearby, some only 50 yards away. Preparations were made to guard the airplane against disaster. Steam dropped to half its normal pressure, then rose and the ship fought its way back into the wind.

OPPOSERS OF CONGRESS MAY SENATOR LONG BE IN SESSION ELECT SANDERS NEXT SUMMER

Louisianan Elected Wednesday by 17,000 Votes in Unofficial Ballot

NEW ORLEANS, Dec. 28.—(UP)—J. V. Sanders, Jr., unofficial candidate for congressman from the sixth Louisiana district in a highly unofficial election, polled three times more votes than Mrs. Bolivar E. Kemp, the official candidate in the official election.

This and developments in other parts of the state were lumped together today by many politicians as heralding the collapse of Sen. Huey P. Long's political domination of the state. Long left for Washington last night, announcing that he would press for re-distribution of wealth at the coming session of congress and get the law-makers to "whittle the rich down to frying pan size."

Sanders will leave for Washington in a day or two to demand recognition by congress as the duly elected representative from the sixth district.

Three Legislative Proposals May Keep Solons in Capital Long Time

WASHINGTON, Dec. 28.—(UP)—Three legislative proposals only slightly interwoven with the administration's recovery program may force congress to remain in session through next summer. Democratic house leaders admitted today.

Hope for early adjournment would be blasted, they said, if President Roosevelt urges action on the Tugwell food and drug bill, permanent transportation coordination, and communication merger proposals.

All three matters would, it was said, result in breaks in party ranks. Controversy already has developed about the drastic food and drug bill.

Transportation Coordinator Eastman has been working on a report which he may submit before February 1, outlining the need of coordination in rail, water and truck traffic. The emergency transportation plan enacted last session was only a temporary device. Eastman now is assembling data obtained from transportation sources relative to equipment costs, competition between rails and waterways, duplicating lines, etc.

Substitutes for the far-reaching Tugwell food and drug bill probably will be given careful consideration. Rep. Huddleston, Dem. Ala., has announced he will introduce a bill providing for labeling by the bureau of standards of all commodities. Under his plan even clothing would carry "symbols" showing grade and quality.

The proposals for communication mergers, affecting radio-telephone and telephone systems, have been submitted to chairmen of senate and house interstate commerce committees for study by the president's interdepartmental committee.

BULLS TAKE CONTROL AND ISSUES SOAR

Millions of Dollars Added to Value of Stocks as New Highs Are Reached

CASH TRANSACTIONS

Trading Quiet as Compared With Wednesday; Tickers Keep Up With Market

NEW YORK, Dec. 28.—(UP)—Millions were added to the market value of stocks today in a quiet continuation of yesterday's rally that brought the stock list to levels touched in the early December recovery.

Rising tendencies prevailed all day and prices near the close were not far from the day's best despite moderate profit-taking. Trading was quiet as compared with yesterday's 3,080,000 shares, however, and tickers were easily able to keep abreast of the market at all times.

A feature of the day aside from the rise of one to more than four points was the large number of cash transactions. These represent deals for tax purposes and have to be made for cash and immediate delivery inasmuch as there will be no delivery of stocks until next Tuesday under the two-day delivery rule of the exchange. No deliveries are made on Saturday.

Commodities and bonds rose with stocks and the dollar firmed up slightly in terms of foreign exchange. Grains were exceptions in the commodity group, wheat, oats, and rye being slightly lower.

Automobile issues led in activity on the stock exchange followed closely by utilities which picked up sharply when Consolidated Gas company ordered the regular quarterly dividend on common stock.

In the automobile section, heavy trading was done in General Motors, the most active stock on the board. One block of that issue was sold at 35. It later reached 35 1/2 up to 7.8 points. Duffel, largest stockholder in General Motors, made a new high for the year at 95 7/8 up 3 7/8 points. Automobile equipments were strong with the motor shares.

Activity in the utilities centered around United Corporation, Consolidated Gas, and Columbia Gas. Consolidated reached 37 1/2 up 2 points, and others of the group

ARREST TWO MORE IN PRIEST'S DEATH

NEW YORK, Dec. 28.—(UP)—Two more suspects in the fatal slaying of Archbishop Leon Touhayan of the Armenian Orthodox church were arrested today. Counsel for others of the seven now held hinted the assassination was a "Bolshevik plot" to discredit "Pashnak," the revolutionary society which seeks freedom of Armenia from Soviet control.

John Mirilian, 21, and Harry Saradon, 24, have been identified by members of the congregation of the Holy Cross church as among the gang that surrounded the archbishop when he was cut down before the altar of the church during Sunday services, police said.

BARBERS OF STATE MUST RAISE PRICES

SAN FRANCISCO, Dec. 28.—(UP)—State recovery administration officials made another attempt today to have California barbers establish the uniform price of 65 cents for hair-cutting.

Timothy A. Reardon, general manager of the CRA, announced restoration of the price established by the barbers in their code when it became effective last October. For a time most of the barbers adhered to the code price but competition and dissatisfaction drove them back to the old price of 50 cents.

Many barbers doubted that Reardon's efforts to raise the price would be successful.

if the controversial communications proposal come up, "We won't get out of here until October."

Rep. Treadway, Repn., Mass., sharply criticized the method used by the president in proposing legislation last congress. He urged that the president's entire program be laid before congress "and the people in his message."

"We didn't know last session what we would have to act on from day to day," Treadway said. "If he has a definite policy and program he should confide in congress in other than a piecemeal fashion."

Rancher To Spend Nights In Jail For Three Months

James A. Mauchan, 37, R. D., Garden Grove, must spend every night for the next 90 days in the Orange County jail but will be permitted to work on CWA projects in the daytime whenever possible.

That was the substance of a sentence meted out by Judge Kenneth Morrison today when Mauchan pleaded guilty to reckless driving charges preferred in the justice court after a previous charge of drunken driving had been dismissed.

Mauchan had his preliminary hearing on the drunken driving count set yesterday for January 2, but withdrew the plea today, pleaded guilty to reckless driving waived time for judgment and was given the three months conditional sentence. In addition to the jail term, he will be on probation and unable to drive a car for the next six months.

The rancher was arrested Tuesday morning after his car had collided with a car driven by Harry J. Rainey, 30, Los Angeles, on West Seventeenth street in a heavy fog. No one was hurt.

Whitman's body was found in a field near an isolated road. He had been shot through the temple. The death gun, a .38 caliber automatic and a powder-stained handkerchief were found nearby. Numbers had been filed from the gun. The handkerchief bore no identification marks, according to authorities.

She is suffering from hydrocephalus or water on the brain. Her parents enlisted James R. Wedell, famous racing aviator, to speed her to Dr. Dandy after she was stricken Christmas.

EXPECT PRESIDENT TO HAVE LAST WORD ON DOLLAR'S FATE AT CONGRESSIONAL SESSION

By RODNEY DUTCHER
(Register Washington Correspondent)

WASHINGTON, Dec. 27.—The inflation issue probably will be decided before the Seventy-third Congress adjourns, a few months hence.

But not necessarily by congress. The session opens during a lull on the currency front and it now seems a safe bet that President Roosevelt will be able to keep the fate of the dollar in his own hands.

GETS $3000 IN SETTLEMENT OF DAMAGE ACTION

Speedy settlement of a damage suit was effected yesterday when Ira Kroese, attorney for Mrs. Tora Watanabe, widow of Shumkichi Watanabe, who was killed in an automobile accident, filed a suit for $5000 against William C. Crowell and at the same time filed notice of settlement of the action for $3000.

In the complaint for judgment which named as plaintiffs Mrs. Watanabe and her three children, Miye Watanabe, 15, Miyo Watanabe, 12, and Esuo Watanabe, 10, it was alleged that Watanabe received injuries August 12, last, from which he died the same day, when his automobile was involved in a collision at the intersection of Adams and Bushard boulevards, near Talbert, with an automobile driven by Crowell, the defendant.

Crowell was accused of operating his automobile in a careless, negligent and reckless manner. In an answer filed with the complaint and agreement of compromise, Crowell alleged contributory negligence on the part of Watanabe.

Under terms of the settlement the widow and children will receive a total of $3000 of which $2000 will go to the widow. The remaining $1000 is to be divided equally between the three children. Fred Forgy was attorney for Crowell.

BAN DANCING AFTER MIDNIGHT SATURDAY

Following frequent complaints that county officers were discriminating against public dance halls in the county by forcing them to close at midnight on Saturday, District Attorney S. B. Kaufman issued a legal opinion today, based on county ordinance 279, regulating the opening, conducting and carrying on of public dances.

Kaufman pointed out that the ordinance contains nothing to prevent dancing on Sunday, except that no permit can be granted for the period from midnight to 6 a. m. on Sunday. This automatically makes it illegal for the dance halls in unincorporated areas to remain open after midnight Saturday and will bring prosecution and forcible closing if not complied with, the district attorney declared.

LIQUOR BLAMED IN DIVORCE COMPLAINT

Accusing him of habitual intoxication Mrs. Nina Fay Halstead has filed suit in superior court for a divorce from Newman Donald Halstead. According to her complaint her husband frequently came home intoxicated and would not heed her objections to his excessive use of liquor.

She also charged that her husband frequently told her that he had to be away from home at night attending meetings of workers of the firm by which he was employed. The meetings, she charged, on many occasions were not scheduled and her husband attended dances.

The Halsteads were married May 4, 1926, and separated April 21, 1929.

When the dollar is devalued to 50 cents—as seems to be the administration's plan—three or four billion dollars of new currency may be issued on the basis of a doubled value of the nation's gold reserve.

That would be inflation of a type, but quite another picture than the spectacle of a runaway "greenback" Congress, which many opponents of the Roosevelt monetary policy claim to fear.

Greenback Howl Certain
A howl for greenbacks from many western and southern members is inevitable. Its intensity and consequences will depend on the success of the recovery program and the effect of the White House currency efforts.

Volume of the anti-inflation protest will be similarly dependent, though the recent collapse of a solidified opposition movement leaves the issue largely between Roosevelt and the radical inflationists, except for the fact that Roosevelt will receive full conservative support in any bout with the extremists.

Such conservative backing, a dependable residue of administration strength in Congress and a popular sentiment which will back Roosevelt in anything he does, makes it almost certain that inflationists would be unable to pass a bill over a presidential veto.

Concessions Possible
That leaves Roosevelt free to carry on his own policy, which may include concessions to inflation sentiment, such as purchase of silver for a currency base and possibly a promise of new currency based on a revalued gold reserve.

The Roosevelt plan calls for raising the commodity price index to the 1926 level and subsequent stabilization which, under the Warren plan now favored at the White House, would be based and maintained on the commodity price index.

The dollar first must fall in value in relation to gold and other commodities. One method used in achieving that effect is the gold purchase plan, though there is bitter debate as to its practicability.

For two months the Treasury, through the R. F. C., has been buying gold at a rate far above statutory price, to depreciate the dollar.

Glass Will Erupt
The first currency fight is likely to come over administration-sponsored legislation to validate and strengthen the gold purchase policy and possibly other operations not yet announced. Senator Carter Glass and the other money conservatives then will unleash their guns.

Glass is set to question the legality of the gold buying plan, as did Undersecretary Dean Acheson before he was fired from the Treasury. The administration has been preparing for such an attack in Congress.

Conservatives also are expected to make a futile effort to take away the inflation powers which Congress gave to Roosevelt in the last session. At the other extreme will be those who want to make inflation mandatory.

The "sound money" group finds one of its previously most impressive arguments weakened by success of the Treasury's December financing.

DISMISS CHARGES AGAINST SERVICE STATION OPERATOR

Harold Clark Hood, Santa Ana service station owner, who was tried before a jury on November 21 for violation of the oil substitution act and was scheduled to face a retrial on the same charges today, had the counts against him dismissed yesterday upon motion of Deputy District Attorney Leo J. Fris.

At the first trial, the jury was unable to reach a decision and was dismissed in justice court by Judge Kenneth Morrison. It was believed that the jury voted 11 to 1 for acquittal. Fris had the retrial date set but announced yesterday that new evidence had been presented which would make it virtually impossible to secure a conviction and rather than go to further expense with another trial, the charges would be dropped.

Hood was charged on November 9 with three violations of the state act, that of selling gasoline without marking the container, mixing grades of gasoline and advertising gasoline not on sale. Hood was represented in court by Attorney Franklin West. James Randel, deputy sealer of weights and measures, was the chief witness appearing against Hood while P. Fred Sidebottom, sealer of weights and measures at that time, was the complaining witness.

WILL ROGERS says:

SANTA MONICA, Dec. 28.

(To the Editor of The Register:)

This is a day and time when everybody gives opinions on something they know nothing about. So today I discuss opera, grand opera. The Chicago Operahouse opened for the first time in two years. It was never a success because it was constructed wrong. It was built so everybody could see the stage, but nobody could see each other. So now it's been remodeled so you can't see the stage, but can see the price mark on every dress in the house. And it's doing fine. New York opened its season with an American opera for the first time in history. American music has always been considered by the opera-goers as fit for nothing but the ears. But never looked good through a lorgnette from a box. That's about all the opera news that's fit to print.

Yours,

WILL ROGERS.

OPPONENTS OF SENATOR LONG ELECT SANDERS

Mrs. Kemp already is in Washington for that purpose. She was elected Dec. 5 in an election called by Gov. O. K. Allen, a Long subordinate, but because of court restraining orders and a general citizens boycott, received only 5,000 votes.

Sanders was elected yesterday in an election called by a citizens committee which has no official standing. He received 17,000 votes. The seat is that made vacant by the death of Mrs. Kemp's husband.

In Shreveport citizens were circulating a petition asking President Roosevelt to oust both Long and John H. Overton, Long subordinate and the second Louisiana representative in the upper house, from the senate. Ruffin G. Pleasant, former governor, was the first signer.

In New Orleans the long faction seemed the under-dog in a three cornered municipal election campaign because of its split with the "old regulars," dominant local organization.

Rep. Treadway, Rep. Miss., sharply criticized the method used by the president in proposing legislation last congress. He urged that the president's entire program be laid before congress "and the people in his message."

"We didn't know last session what we would have to act on from day to day," Treadway said. "If he has a definite policy and program he should confide in congress in other than a piecemeal fashion."

Rancher To Spend Nights In Jail For Three Months

James A. Mauerhan, 37, R. D., Garden Grove, must spend every night for the next 90 days in the Orange County jail but will be permitted to work on CWA projects in the daytime whenever possible.

That was the substance of a sentence meted out by Judge Kenneth Morrison today when Mauerhan pleaded guilty to reckless driving charges preferred in the justice court after a previous charge of drunken driving had been dismissed.

Mauerhan had his preliminary hearing on the drunken driving count set yesterday for January 3, but withdrew the plea today, pleading guilty to reckless driving waived time for judgment and was given the three months conditional sentence. In addition to the jail term, he will be on probation and unable to drive a car for the next six months.

The rancher was arrested Tuesday morning after his car had collided with a car driven by Harry J. Rainey, 30, Los Angeles, on West Seventeenth street in a heavy fog. No one was hurt.

EXPECT PRESIDENT TO HAVE LAST WORD ON DOLLAR'S FATE AT CONGRESSIONAL SESSION

By RODNEY DUTCHER
(Register Washington Correspondent)

WASHINGTON, Dec. 27.—The inflation issue probably will be decided before the Seventy-third Congress adjourns, a few months hence.

But not necessarily by congress. The session opens during a lull on the currency front and it now seems a safe bet that President Roosevelt will be able to keep the fate of the dollar in his own hands.

GETS $3000 IN SETTLEMENT OF DAMAGE ACTION

Speedy settlement of a damage suit was effected yesterday when Ira Kroese, attorney for Mrs. Tora Watanabe, widow of Shumkichi Watanabe, who was killed in an automobile accident, filed a suit for $5000 against William C. Crowell and at the same time filed notice of settlement of the action for $3000.

In the complaint for judgment which named as plaintiff Mrs. Watanabe and her three children, Miye Watanabe, 15, Miyo Watanabe, 12, and Esuo Watanabe, 10, it was alleged that Watanabe received injuries August 13, last, from which he died the same day, when his automobile was involved in a collision at the intersection of Adams and Bushard boulevards, near Talbert, with an automobile driven by Crowell, the defendant. Crowell was accused of operating his automobile in a careless, negligent and reckless manner. In an answer filed with the complaint and agreement of compromise Crowell alleged contributory negligence on the part of Watanabe.

Under terms of the settlement the widow and children will receive a total of $3000 of which $2000 will go to the widow. The remaining $1000 is to be divided equally between the three children. Fred Forgy was attorney for Crowell.

BAN DANCING AFTER MIDNIGHT SATURDAY

Following frequent complaints that county officers were discriminating against public dance halls in the county by forcing them to close at midnight on Saturday, District Attorney S. B. Kaufman issued a legal opinion today, based on county ordinance 279, regulating the opening, conducting and carrying on of public dances. Kaufman pointed out that the ordinance contains nothing to prevent dancing on Sunday, except that no permit can be granted for the period from midnight to 6 a. m. on Sunday. This automatically makes it illegal for the dance halls in unincorporated areas to remain open after midnight Saturday and will bring prosecution and forcible closing if not complied with, the district attorney declared.

LIQUOR BLAMED IN DIVORCE COMPLAINT

Accusing him of habitual intoxication Mrs. Nina Fay Halstead has filed suit in superior court for a divorce from Newman Donald Halstead. According to her complaint, her husband frequently came home intoxicated and would not heed her objections to his excessive use of liquor.

She also charged that her husband frequently told her that he had to be away from home at night attending meetings of workers of the firm by which he was employed. The meetings, she charged, on many occasions were not scheduled and her husband attended dances.

The Halsteads were married May 4, 1926, and separated April 21, 1930.

28,192 OUTSIDE CARS HERE IN 2 DAY PERIOD

With an average of 27 cars per minute passing Fourth and Main streets during shopping hours last Friday and Saturday, a remarkably heavy traffic load, believed to be the heaviest in the history of Santa Ana, was checked by the crews of men working under the CWA traffic census to determine the increase of driving caused by Christmas trading.

A cordon of men was thrown around the city to check all cars entering or leaving the city by any of the 16 "gates." There was a total of 35,553 cars coming into Santa Ana and 34,072 leaving town with Saturday showing the heaviest volume, 19,325 entering and 18,338 leaving. The counting was from 9:30 a. m. to 9:30 p. m., the period of greatest trading.

The census heads realized that this total included traffic going through the city on main arteries so previous checks made on average days were used to compute an estimate of local trading traffic.

It was figured that 3554 cars on Friday and 4177 on Saturday were going through the city on main boulevards, leaving a net shopping traffic total of 2819 cars. This, it is held, is ample proof of Santa Ana's claim as an attractive shopping center for all Orange county.

33 Cars Each Minute, the busiest intersection in Santa Ana, had a considerable increase in traffic during the two-day holiday shopping. On Friday, 18,733 cars were counted and 20,355 on Saturday, making an average of 27.2 cars per minute. The heaviest count was from 4:30 to 5 p. m. Saturday, when 999 cars were checked, an average of 33.3 per minute.

The total crossing Fourth and Main streets was 2135 cars greater than the total entering the city during the two days.

With the shopping survey concluded, the crews are covering the western part of the city at present, with a few main business district intersections included. Fourth street will soon be checked its entire length, as will South Main street, Edinger and other southern traffic arteries.

Heaviest On Boulevard
During the two-day holiday checking, Santa Ana boulevard at Flower had the heaviest load, with 3443 entering the city and 3265 leaving on Friday, for a total of 6708. Main street at Santa Ana boulevard dropped to 5170. First street at Grand was third with 4142, while South Main at Delhi road was fourth with 3022 cars. Figures for Saturday were 15 per cent higher than Friday.

To show the relative importance of the 16 entrances to the city, the following figures show the incoming total, outgoing total and the grand total, all computed for Friday:

The Pontiac Motor company, which almost doubled its retail volume in 1933 with the first straight eight to enter the low price field, is ready with its 1934 car, according to W. R. Gordon, sales manager for the Reid Motor company.

H. J. Klingler, new president and general manager of the company, former sales chief for Chevrolet, this week gave news and magazine writers their first opportunity to inspect and drive the 1934 straight eight. According to Mr. Klingler, the new car announced may be expected at or just before the opening of the New York Automobile Show on January 6th.

The new Pontiac again is a straight eight, like its predecessor which went to fourth place in the industry this year, it still remains in the low price field. However, it is hinted that prices will be slightly higher on the 1934 models, in line with the price advances expected from nearly all major manufacturers.

Here are some of the high spots: "Knee action" wheels and higher speed—larger, longer, heavier and with greater power—even better fuel economy than the 1933 model, mileage said to have been raised something like 10 per cent.

Two Riders Injured In Accidents

Victims of similar accidents and injuries yesterday afternoon, Roy Tedethoff, 23, 126 South Jamison street, Orange, is confined in the Orange County hospital and Donald Hess, 14, 1024 West Third street, is being treated at the Santa Ana Valley hospital for leg injuries and cuts and bruises.

Tedethoff was riding a motorcycle and was crowded into the curb at Chapman and Grand avenue in Orange by a car, reported to be driven by C. H. Hull, 134 North Shaffer street, Orange, at 2:30 p. m. yesterday. The injured man was taken to the hospital by Hull where he was given treatment for a dislocated ankle and severe cuts and bruises.

Hess, son of Mr. and Mrs. J. W. Hess, was riding a bicycle and clinging to the rear of a truck traveling on Seventeenth street near Prospect avenue. The bicycle hit a depression in the road and Hess was thrown against the truck and then to the road, falling heavily. The truck went on, the driver apparently unaware that the youth even had been hanging on the vehicle. Passing motorists took the boy to the Santa Ana Valley hospital where it was shown he received a severe laceration from the knee to the foot on the right leg. He will be confined for several days.

Temporarily escaping arrest by driving their car over headstones and graves in Fairhaven cemetery, two men were arrested yesterday afternoon by deputy sheriffs, arraigned in the Orange justice court this morning and given sentences for petty theft of gasoline.

George F. Sharer, 29, and Leslie Purviance, 23, both of Fullerton, were employees of the Fairhaven Cemetery association until a year ago, when they were discharged. They retained the key to the gasoline pump, however. They were suspected of returning about once a week to the cemetery, unlocking the pump and stealing a total of more than 1000 gallons of gasoline, so the sheriff's office was notified this week.

Deputy Sheriffs Ives Brown and Walter Dungan waited for the suspects on several evenings and finally found them Tuesday night. There was a dance fog over the cemetery and the two men heard the officers approaching and fled in their car. Unable to find their way out of the cemetery, both suspects and officers circled and recircled around in the many cemetery roads without coming together. Several times, Brown and Dungan stopped their car to hear the other motor and then continued the pursuit.

The chase suddenly ended at the end of a blind street. Sharer and Purviance continued to drive right over the curb, across headstones and graves and through a hedge to freedom. The officers secured their number, traced the ownership of the car and arrested them at their homes yesterday and booked them at the jail for investigation of burglary.

Judge Swartz sentenced Sharer to spend three months in the jail and Purviance got four months.

Issue Warning On Bad Check Worker
Garage and service station operators have been warned by sheriff's officers and police to be on the lookout for a bad check artist who has been operating in Southern California and is now believed to be in Orange county.

The man, who has frequently given the name of E. R. Long, makes a stamping tool for putting initials on garage tools and gives a fictitious check for $20 or $25 for purchasing additional material. He is described as being about 40 or 45 years of age, 5 feet 10 to 12 inches tall and weighing 200 pounds.

Pearson Petty, 10, son of Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Petty, 1809 West Second street, was skating on some Christmas skates yesterday afternoon. He fell down, broke his right arm and was taken to the Orange County hospital.

Several hours later, his brother, Herbert, 11, put on the skates, also fell down and broke his right arm in the same place at his brother. He was also taken to the county hospital and both boys were brought home today.

USE OF X-RAY TO TEST FRUIT, STARTED HERE

County Agricultural Commissioner Dixon W. Tubbs is responsible for an experiment that is expected to be of great value to agriculture in California.

Through his experiments he is perfecting use of the fluoroscope in detecting oranges that have granulated to the extent that they fail to conform to the state citrus fruit standards.

The suggestion was made by Tubbs, more in the matter of a lost than anything else. Tubbs said this morning that at a meeting of agricultural commissioners and their deputies the problem of detecting crystallized, or dried, fruit was discussed at length with the inspectors declaring that they were having considerable difficulty in detecting fruit that does not conform to standards. The outside of the fruit has all appearance of perfect fruit.

Tubbs said that he jokingly suggested that an X-ray be used by the inspectors. After he had returned from the meeting he thought more seriously of his suggestion and determined to give it a test.

Tubbs and one of his deputies, W. H. Wright went to a Santa Ana shoe store where a fluoroscope was used in studying the alignments of bones in the feet of customers. Instead of feet, they substituted oranges which had perfect exteriors, but which were suspected of granulation. One of the oranges, under the fluoroscope showed up clearly as granulated. The other was good. The fluoroscope, Tubbs said, showed the condition of the fruit distinctly.

A more extensive use of the fluoroscope is being considered in fruit standardization work as Tubbs has pointed out that if the scientific apparatus will show a granulated orange it probably could be used to check other fruits.

28,192 OUTSIDE CARS HERE IN 2 DAY PERIOD

With an average of 27 cars per minute passing Fourth and Main streets during shopping hours last Friday and Saturday, a remarkably heavy traffic load, believed to be the heaviest in the history of Santa Ana, was checked by crews of men working under the CWA traffic census to determine the increase of driving caused by Christmas trading.

A cordon of men was thrown around the city to check all cars entering or leaving the city by any of the 16 "gates." There was a total of 35,953 cars coming into Santa Ana and 24,072 leaving town with Saturday showing the heaviest volume, 19,335 entering and 18,338 leaving. The counting was from 9:30 a. m. to 9:30 p. m., the period of greatest trading.

The census heads realized that this total included traffic going through the city on main arteries so previous checks made on average days were used to compute an estimate of local trading traffic. It was figured that 3584 cars on Friday and 4177 on Saturday were going through the city on main boulevards, leaving a net shopping traffic total of 2819 cars. This, it is held, is ample proof of Santa Ana's claim as an attractive shopping center for all Orange county.

33 Cars Each Minute
Fourth and Main streets, the busiest intersection in Santa Ana, had a considerable increase in traffic during the two-day holiday shopping. On Friday, 18,733 cars were counted and 20,355 on Saturday, making an average of 27.2 cars per minute. The heaviest count was from 4:30 to 5 p. m. Saturday, when 999 cars were checked, an average of 33.3 per minute.

The total crossing Fourth and Main streets was 3135 cars greater than the total entering the city during the two days.

With the shopping survey concluded, the crews are covering the western part of the city at present, with a few main business district intersections included. Fourth street will soon be checked its entire length, as will South Main street, Edinger and other southern traffic arteries.

Heaviest On Boulevard
During the two-day holiday checking, Santa Ana boulevard at Flower had the heaviest load, with 3443 entering the city and 3265 leaving on Friday, for a total of 6808. Main street at Santa Ana boulevard dropped to 5170. First street at Grand was third with 4142, while South Main at Delhi road was fourth with 3032 cars.

Figures for Saturday were 15 per cent higher than Friday. To show the relative importance of the 16 entrances to the city, the following figures show the incoming total, outgoing total and the grand total, all computed for Friday:

VETERAN WHO GETS JOBS FOR BUDDIES HERE

Sergeant L. B. Loewenstein, who terms himself the "One Man Employment Bureau for Veterans" arrived in Santa Ana last night and will talk before the Santa Ana Legion post tonight. At 5:45 he will go on the air over radio KREB and explain his work for the former service men.

Loewenstein has been seeking jobs for veterans since 1931 and has placed 7500 veterans on payrolls, he reports. In that time he has traveled three times through the 48 states of the union. His method of operation, he says, is to contact the heads of business houses, and industries. If jobs are open Loewenstein notifies the commander of the local Legion post who sends an unemployed veteran to take the job.

Loewenstein served in the United States army from 1913 to 1922 and during the World war was in the 15th Infantry of the First Division. During the war he was awarded the Croix de Guerre. He is a charter member of American Legion post No. 1, Paris, France, and is financing his welfare work from his private income. At present he is writing a book on his travels and experiences seeking work for unemployed veterans. The proceeds from the book, he says, will be turned over to the American Legion Auxiliary for use in that organization's national child welfare program.

SPEAKS HERE

Sgt. L. B. Loewenstein, "one man employment bureau," below, will address the Santa Ana post, American Legion tonight and explain the nature of his private welfare work.

OFFICIAL VOTE ON ELECTION IS ANNOUNCED

Both the Newport harbor and Santa Ana city hall bonds have been officially declared approved following a canvass of the vote cast at the recent special election. The supervisors canvassed the vote Tuesday and County Clerk J. M. Backs this morning released the official results.

At the time of the canvass there was a question as to whether or not the city hall bond issue was successful. A ruling by Assistant District Attorney W. F. Menton was to the effect that the issue had been carried. The question arose as to the total number of votes cast. A bond issue requires a two-thirds majority of the vote cast. It was pointed out that if the total of all votes cast for the city hall bond issue was made the basis for decision the issue had carried. On the other hand if the total Santa Ana vote on other issues were used the bond issue was defeated.

Menton ruled that the city hall bond issue was on a ballot other than the one used for the statewide water and power bond and for that reason only the total vote cast for the city issue could be considered. Many Santa Ana voters voted for the county and state proposals who did not vote on the city issue. There were 1204 ballots voted in Santa Ana and 6957 marked as the city hall project.

Results of the official canvass were: city hall bonds, 4746 yes, 2241 no; Orange County Harbor bonds, 17,530 yes, and 6376 no; State-wide Water and Power project, 8906 yes, and 13,540 no. Total vote cast for the harbor project was 24,068. For the state proposal the total was 23,911 while 6957 votes were cast on the city project.

James Cagney in "Lady Killer," opens a three-day engagement at the Broadway theater today, playing through Saturday.

The story concerns a movie theater usher who rises to the heights of the industry, after a series of incidents which make the picture probably the most entertaining Cagney has made since "Public Enemy."

From usher, he goes to gangster, and then to escape the police, rushes out to Hollywood, where opportunity soon makes him a screen idol. In the picture with him are Mae Clark and Margaret Lindsay as the feminine lures, George Blackwood, Leslie Fenton and Henry O'Neill.

NEW BOOKS IN PUBLIC LIBRARY

BY VERA RAMSEY

The life of Albert Schweitzer presents to the world a deep enigma. Renowned as a musician and philosopher, he chose to turn aside from fame and glory in these fields. Becoming a physician, he built a hospital on the edge of the primeval forest in Africa and buried himself among primitive people. Who is this extraordinary many-sided man who forsakes a thrilling career in Europe to heal natives in Africa? In "Out of My Life and Thought," Albert Schweitzer tells his own story.

It is a story of various great tasks, all exceptionally well done. We read of Albert Schweitzer, the university professor and lecturer. We see him as a musician playing organ recitals in London and Paris and Berlin. Then he is the doctor among his patients in Strasbourg and Africa, adding to this the part of preacher and pastor. As an author he writes epoch-making books on Jesus and Paul, on philosophy, on Johann Sebastian Bach and his music, on organ construction, and as an authority on comparative religions.

Few men have had so varied a life. See him at medicine and surgery, taming the jungle, receiving degrees in England and on the Continent, playing a Bach recital in Paris, practicing on his piano (equipped with organ pedals) late at night on the edge of the African forest. Few men have sacrificed so prominent a career to devote themselves to the service of others.

There have been in past history many interesting groups of people who have banded together for one reason or another. None have surpassed in interest the one discussed by Edward Hallett Carr in "The Romantic Exiles."

This group of revolutionary forefathers left Russia, Germany and Eastern Europe during the 40's and 50's of the last century. They wandered from Paris to London, the Riviera and into Italy, Bakunin, the anarchist, is the best known of this group. One of the most interesting, however, is Alexander Herzen. The heart of this account is the four cornered affair between Alexander Herzen, his wife Natalie, the German poet Herwegh and Emma Herwegh. No psychological novel could surpass the treatment of this situation.

Many of these men and women were people of great wealth. All were imbued with the romanticism of the period. A mass of their intimate letters survives and these supplemented by autobiographies and other documents, enable us to follow closely the emotional reactions of these highly self-conscious individuals.

Most of the treatises upon Russia have been rather pronouncedly either for or against Soviet rule. In "A Physician's Tour in Soviet Russia," Sir James Purves-Stewart gives a short account of his impressions during the summer of 1932. They make no claim to offer anything more than a transient view of the constantly changing conditions of Russian life.

It is not a propagandist statement, whether for or against Communist methods. It is an unprejudiced account of observations by a practicing physician in Soviet Russia, without preconceived ideas of any sort. Some of the institutions investigated merited unstinted praise; some seemed Utopian; whilst others disappointed, even repulsive.

The author sums it up by pointing out that Russia is neither the Heaven of which Communists shout so noisily, nor is it the Hell painted by the Capitalist Press. To him, it is rather a Purgatory of gloom, dark uniformity, in which speech is strictly repressed and where there is a conspicuous absence of adequate stimulus or reward for thrifty or ambitious citizens.

Other new books in the library are: Blodgett, Harvey—Making the Most of Your Income. 174:B 62. Burnham, Anita Willets—Round the World on a Penny. 910.4:B 93. Cadman, S. Parkes—The Prophecies of Israel. 229.92:C 115. Clendenning, Logan—Behind the Doctor. 619.9:C 69.

The library has also added a newspaper which will be of interest to those seeking financial news. This is the new Financial Weekly, which is published every Monday in Boston. It will be found on the newspaper rack in the reading room.

Statistical material is given in great abundance. There are graphs and articles on general business trends for the week and money and foreign exchange rates for the week. Commodity statistics and their interpretation, including commodity price index giving Dow-Jones index of Commodity Future prices are given. There is a weekly dividend calendar and statistics of production and distribution. "The Market Laboratory" studies the theoretical aspects of price movements and "On the Stock Exchange" gives detailed quotations.

In addition to this strictly financial material, there are articles of general economic interest. Four to be found in the issue for December 4, 1933, are: "How Engineers Saved the Pound," by A. L. Harwood; "Profiting by Soviet Recognition," by S. A. Weart, and "Lessons from the Italian Example," by Iver S. Olsen.

It is hoped that this material will meet the needs of business men and students.

Late News From Orange And Nearby Towns

BOOKS OF PAST NEW OFFICERS DISCUSSED AS INSTALLED BY SECTION MEETS 20-30 MEMBERS

ORANGE, Dec. 28.—A pleasant variation of the usual program was enjoyed by members of the Book Review section of the Orange Woman's club yesterday, when they met in the home of Mrs. Mabel Faulkner, leader of the section, instead of in the club's house lobby. In the place of the regular review of current books, they discussed books of past years and reviewed in part a number of the volumes which have received attention during 1933.

Mrs. Faulkner's home was attractive with boughs of cedar in vases and baskets imparting a holiday atmosphere. Mrs. Dian Gardner told of a recent trip to the Salton sea and Chocolate mountains with her husband. At the latter place she said the colored springs of red and yellow were viewed. She advised reading "Beyond the Blue Sierras," as a preliminary to visiting this part of California.

Several of the family sagas which have been issued by publishers during the past few years came up for discussion. Mrs. Faulkner called attention to the fact that books widely read five years ago and 10 years ago when the section was started, now are seldom called for at the city library.

She named the books selected by 1000 students at Columbia university as the best American literature as including "Huckleberry Finn," "Scarlet Letter," "Emerson's Essays," "Leaves of Grass," Edgar Allan Poe's tales, "Morning Becomes Electra," "An American Tragedy," "The Autocrat of the Breakfast Table," "My Antonia," "Moby Dick," selected poems by Edna St. Vincent Millay and "John Brown's Body."

New travel books were briefly mentioned and these included "An Italian Winter" by Charles Brooks, "Africa From Port to Port" by May Mott Smith, "Peacocks and Pagodas" by Paul Edmunds, and "Vacation Travel Charts and Travel Talks" by Frederick L. Columbus.

The books of which a million copies were sold were listed as "Main Street," "If Winter Comes" and more recently "Good Earth." She named "Anthony Adverse" by Hervey Allen and "What Now, Little Man?" by Fallada, as two books widely read at present.

Those present who gave reviews of some of the books they had read during December were Mrs. W. C. Pixley, Mrs. Dian Gardner, Mrs. Earl Elson, Mrs. E. B. Workman, Mrs. Fred Alden, Mrs. George Peterson and Mrs. Helene Gardner of Santa Ana. Plans for the program to be presented by the section at the club meeting on May 7 were presented by Mrs. Pixley, chairman of a program committee recently appointed.

NEW BOOKS IN PUBLIC LIBRARY

BY VERA RAMSEY

The life of Albert Schweitzer presents to the world a deep enigma. Renowned as a musician and philosopher, he chose to turn aside from fame and glory in these fields. Becoming a physician, he built a hospital on the edge of the primeval forest in Africa and buried himself among primitive people. Who is this extraordinary many-sided man who forsakes a brilliant career in Europe to heal natives in Africa? In "Out of My Life and Thought," Albert Schweitzer tells his own story.

It is a story of various great tasks, all exceptionally well done. We read of Albert Schweitzer, the university professor and lecturer. We see him as a musician playing organ recitals in London and Paris and Berlin. Then he is the doctor among his patients in Strasbourg and Africa, adding to this the part of preacher and pastor. As an author he writes epoch-making books on Jesus and Paul, on philosophy, on Johann Sebastian Bach and his music, on organ construction, and as an authority on comparative religions.

Few men have had so varied a life. See him at medicine and surgery, taming the jungle, receiving degrees in England and the continent, playing a Bach recital in Paris, practicing on his piano (equipped with organ pedals) late at night on the edge of the African forest. Few men have sacrificed so prominent a career to devote themselves to the service of others.

There have been in past history many interesting groups of people who have banded together for one reason or another. None have surpassed in interest the one discussed by Edward Hallett Carr in "The Romantic Exiles."

This group of revolutionary forerunners left Russia, Germany and Eastern Europe during the 40's and 50's of the last century. They wandered from Paris to London, the Riviera, and into Italy, Rumania, the anarchist, is the best known of this group. One of the most interesting, however, is Alexander Herzen. The heart of this account is the four cornered affair between Alexander Herzen, his wife Natalie, the German poet Herwegh and Emma Herwegh. No psychological novel could treat the treatment of this situation.

Many of these men and women were people of great wealth. All were imbued with the romanticism of the period. A mass of their intimate letters survives and these supplemented by autobiographies and other documents, enable us to follow closely the emotional reactions of these highly self-conscious individuals.

Most of the treatises upon Russia have been rather pronounced either for or against Soviet ideals. In "A Physician's Tour in Soviet Russia," Sir James Purves-Stewart gives a short account of his impressions during the summer of 1932. They make no claim for anything more than a transient view of the constantly changing conditions of Russian life.

It is not a propagandist statement, whether for or against Communist methods. It is an unprejudiced account of observations by a practicing physician who visited Russia without preconceived ideas of any sort. Some of the institutions investigated merited unstinted praise, some seemed Utopian; whilst others disappointing, even repulsive. The author sums it up by pointing out that Russia is neither the Heaven of which Communists shout so noisily, nor is it the Hell painted by the Capitalistic Press. To him, it is rather a Purgatory of gloom, drab uniformity, in which free space is strictly repressed and where there is a conspicuous absence of adequate stimulus or reward for thrifty or ambitious citizens.

The library has also added a newspaper which will be of interest to those seeking financial news. This is Barron's Financial Weekly, which is published every Monday in Boston. It will be found on the newspaper rack in the reading room.

Statistical material is given in great abundance. There are graphs and articles on general business trends for the week and money and foreign exchange rates for the week. Commodity statistics and their interpretation, including commodity price index giving Dow-Jones index of Commodity Future prices are given. There is a weekly dividend calendar and statistics of production and distribution. "The Market Laboratory" studies the theoretical aspects of price movements and "On the Stock Exchange" gives detailed quotations.

In addition to this strictly financial material, there are articles of general economic interest. Four to be found in the issue for December 4, 1933, are: "How England Guards the Pound," by Alzada Comstock; "New Savings Needed," by C. E. Harwood; "Profiting by Soviet Recognition," by S. A. Weart; and "Lessons from the Italian Example," by Iver S. Olsen.

It is hoped that this material will meet the needs of business men and students.

BOOKS OF PAST NEW OFFICERS DISCUSSED AS INSTALLED BY SECTION MEETS 20-30 MEMBERS

ORANGE, Dec. 28.—A pleasant variation of the usual program was enjoyed by members of the Book Review section of the Orange Woman's club yesterday, when they met in the home of Mrs. Mabel Faulkner, leader of the section, instead of in the club's regular review of current books, they discussed books of past years and reviewed in part a number of the volumes which have received attention during 1933.

Mrs. Faulkner's home was attractive with bouquets of cedar in vases and baskets imparting a holiday atmosphere. Mrs. Dian Gardner told of a recent trip to the Salton sea and Chocolate mountains with her husband. At the latter place she said the colored springs of red and yellow were viewed. She advised reading "Beyond the Blue Sierras," as a preliminary to visiting this part of California.

Several of the family sagas which have been issued by publishers during the past few years came up for discussion. Mrs. Faulkner called attention to the fact that books widely read five years ago and 10 years ago when the section was started, now are seldom called for at the city library.

She named the books selected by 1000 students at Columbia university as including "Huckleberry Finn," "Scarlet Letter," "Emerson's Essays," "Leaves of Grass," Edgar Allan Poe's tales, "Morning Becomes Electra," "The Virginian," "An American Tragedy," "The Autocrat of the Breakfast Table," "My Antonia," "Moby Dick," selected poems by Edna St. Vincent Millay and "John Brown's Body."

New travel books were briefly mentioned and these included "An Italian Winter" by Charles Brooks, "Africa From Port to Port" by May Mott Smith, "Peacocks and Pagodas" by Paul Edmunds, and "Vacation Travel Charts and Travel Talks" by Frederick L. Columns.

The books of which a million copies were sold were listed as "Main Street," "If Winter Comes," and more recently "Good Earth." She named "Anthony Adverse" by Hervey Allen and "What Now, Little Man?" by Fallada, as two books widely read at present.

Those present who gave reviews of some of the books they had read during December were Mrs. W. C. Pixley, Mrs. Dian Gardner, Mrs. Earl Elson, Mrs. E. B. Workman, Mrs. Fred Alden, Mrs. George Peterson and Mrs. Helena Gardner of Santa Ana. Plans for the program to be presented by the section at the club meeting on May 7 were presented by Mrs. Pixley, chairman of a program committee recently appointed.

News Of Orange County Communities

STREET WORK UNDER WAY IN LAGUNA BEACH

LAGUNA BEACH, Dec. 28.—Grading was started yesterday on the improvement of portions of Laguna and Park avenues and Gleneyre street, under the CWA program, city equipment being used. About half of the 40 men on the CWA roll were put to work on the south side of Laguna avenue, which will be cut down several feet. At the present time the pavement slopes toward the north side of the street.

The work is being done by Street Superintendent Floyd W. Case under the direction of A. J. Stead, employed as engineer by the city council for the CWA projects. Men will be added to the job as rapidly as they are required, from the park improvement work. As soon as the work has been finished they will return to the other jobs.

For the first time in its history Heister park is looming as a public domain. Although no materials have been allotted for its improvement the work already done has transformed the land. Paths have been graded, stone retaining walls built, the grounds have been cleared and evened up and made ready for planting.

Flowers, which the designers, Mrs. Lucia Fox Edwards, of South Pasadena, intended for wild flowers, has been brought to the shape required in the park plan and will be planted with wild flower seeds as soon as the allotment comes from county headquarters. A retaining wall at Diver's cove built of stone procured nearby, has permitted the building of a path around the bluff at that point and will prevent erosion. Much work also has been done around the bowling green to beautify that section of the park.

Flights of steps, built of stone, and low stone retaining walls have helped to beautify Elmer Jahraus park at Coast boulevard and Cliff drive. The stone work conforms with that surrounding the Helen Weiser drinking fountain at the intersection of the two streets.

The project of the park and tree board to plant the entire cliffs section to trees has been approved but the necessary materials have not arrived. That work will follow the main projects already under way.

HUNTINGTON BEACH, Dec. 28.—The state finance department will establish an office in Huntington Beach for the purpose of checking on the output of oil wells producing from the state-owned tidelands. The office will include a laboratory for testing oil, determining the gravity and making such tests as determine the price of oil.

The state will also employ gaugers and field men and will keep tabs on all wells in the field to insure that the allotment is observed at all producing wells. Employees of the state finance department were in the field yesterday in an effort to locate a suitable site for the new state office and laboratory here. As yet no site has been selected.

It is said that a site is located somewhere in town lot oil field or in close proximity to it.

The majority of the oil operators who have wells producing from the tidelands have signed the state's royalty agreement. Oil operators are holding daily conferences in Los Angeles in an effort to speed final settlement of the matter.

LA HABRA GIRL, C. S. JOHANSON WED IN CHURCH

LA HABRA, Dec. 28.—Miss Phyllis Pauline Brewster, of La Habra, became the bride Tuesday afternoon of Charles Stephenson Johanson, of Placentia, Calif. The ceremony was performed before a large group of friends of the couple in the La Habra Methodist church, with the Rev. H. O. Simmons reading the vows.

The bride approached the altar to music played on the organ by Miss Helen Jackson, of La Habra, a friend of the bride. The bride entered on the arm of her father, Charles L. Brewster. She wore a long white satin gown trimmed in tulle seed pearls and pinned at the throat with a pearl brooch, an heirloom more than 100 years old, which was loaned to her by a close friend, Mrs. William Matthews Quinn. A small white net hat, with a face veil, and white satin slippers completed the bride's costume. Her bouquet was of white gardenias and lilies of the valley.

Miss Vivienne Brewster, sister of the bride, attended her as maid of honor. She wore a long green moire gown and gold slippers, carrying a bouquet of Talisman roses. Frederick Johanson, of Franklin, attended his brother as best man.

Proceeding the ceremony, Miss Jackson played "Salut d'Amour" (Elgar) and was also accompanist for Miss Mabel Bryant, a soloist, of Colusa, who sang "Calm is the Night" Mohm. The recessional music was from Mendelssohn.

Mrs. Brewster, mother of the bride wore a pale pink afternoon gown and a corsage of white gardenias.

After the wedding ceremony the bridal party and members of the families gathered at the Brewster home on the La Habra Murphy-Coyote lease, where a wedding dinner was served. The table was centered with a silver Christmas tree surrounded by crystal, red and white linens. The wedding cake was cut by the bride.

Places were marked for Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Brewster, of Whittier, Mr. and Mrs. J. L. Brewster, grandparents of the bride, from Fullerton; Miss Helen Jackson, Miss Vivienne Brewster, and Mr. and Mrs. C. L. Brewster, of La Habra; Miss Mabel Bryant, of Colusa; Frederick Johanson, of Franklin, and the new Mr. and Mrs. Johanson.

END RUNAWAY GIRL. SOLUTION OF THEFT HERE

Clearing up the disappearance of a Culver City girl in October and the theft of clothing and money yesterday from the home of B. L. Wonder, 514 South Broadway, Miss Leona Roth, alias Janet Dixon, 15, was found last night in a Long Beach hotel with most of the loot in her possession.

Wonder reported to police yesterday that "Miss Dixon," who had been working at his home for the past six weeks, disappeared while the family was away from home. She left a note to Mr. and Mrs. Wonder, saying, "I hate to do this but things were getting too hot for me in this town. Goodbye, Leona."

The clue to the girl's real identity was given by the daughter of Wonder, who had mailed some Christmas cards for her friend and noticed one to a Mrs. Roth in Culver City. When the girl's mother got the card, she notified Santa Ana police Sunday that her daughter had been missing since October.

Police learned that the girl had taken a Santa Ana taxi to Long Beach. Mr. and Mrs. Wonder, the girl's mother and Long Beach police started searching hotels last night and found the girl. She was taken home by her mother and Wonder indicated to police he would not sign a complaint against her. The stolen articles, including three dresses, two hats, one leather jacket, $31 in cash and a $250 gold piece, were returned this afternoon by police, with the exception of what money the girl had spent.

Former Resident Opens Office Here

Dr. Perry Davis, former resident of Santa Ana, is transferring from Hollywood to open dental offices at Tenth and Broadway in this city next Tuesday, he announced today. He will carry on the practice of Dr. Will Flood, who recently passed away.

Santa Ana's new doctor is a member of the American, Southern California and Los Angeles county dental associations, and is transferring his membership from the Los Angeles to the Orange County organization this week.

Dr. Davis attended grammar school here between 1908 and 1915, and is a graduate of Fullerton high school. Following his graduation from dental school, he has practiced his profession in Los Angeles and Hollywood.

-- News Behind The News --

WASHINGTON
By George Durne

HUEY

Huey Long says this business of an income tax case against him has been brought up 750 times and each time just before Congress was to convene.

Nevertheless there is a fair chance the government will make some move against the Louisiana Kingfish before March.

That is the month when the statute of limitations runs out on some of the Senator's returns that investigators think might be revived so the Federal Treasury would benefit by better than a quarter of a million dollars.

Washington expects the Kingfish to put up an exceptionally lusty squawk when the blow falls. Huey has an obvious defense. His Louisiana political empire has crumbled just about 100 per cent in the last two weeks and he can charge pure and unadulterated persecution by an unfriendly administration.

Officials here vehemently deny this. They say privately the word was passed over a month ago to press the investigation of Long's tax returns to a conclusion regardless of how the chips fall. One of Henry Morgenthau's first actions after taking over the Treasury was to order an exploratory operation reaching the heart.

This was before Huey's erstwhile lieutenants ran out on him—at least publicly. They had been getting their hand-bags ready for some weeks.

Federal sleuths first cast an eye on the method Long used in computing his taxable income back in the summer of 1932. Ogden Mills, running the Treasury for Herbert Hoover, finally decided against action presumably because it then would have looked too much like political persecution.

Now, everybody being Democrats together, the bitter end is in sight. Nothing personal of course.

JUGGLERIES

Before the winter's snows melt some of our most nationally-known names are expected to be answering in court to explain away trick returns. These will include both Democrats and Republicans of first water.

Disclosures before the Senate stock market committee as to the slick way in which some of our wealthiest men juggled their incomes and paid anything from nothing to very little have riled the public considerably.

The Roosevelt administration so far has been detecting heart beats almost before they pulsate. Hence some big-shot prosecutions seem inevitable. When the populace turns a thumb down the emperor always orders blood.

DAVE

Word reaches Washington that Andy Mellon is just a wee bit worried about the chances of his Senatorial spokesman, David A. Reed, who comes up for reelection next year.

Pennsylvania as a Gibraltar of Republicanism is a fond memory. Last November's returns upset the G. O. P. chiefs from Pittsburgh to Philadelphia.

What they particularly fear next year is the prevailing national disposition to hang a haymaker on the rich man whenever possible. A punch at Reed would be the next best thing to reaching Mellon himself.

GUFFEY?

Just at present the Republicans are waiting anxiously to see whom the Democrats put up against Senator Reed.

They have heard that Joe Guffey, Democratic National Committeeman working over time building up a state-wide Democratic machine, aspires to the nomination himself.

If so they'll breathe a little easier—although the throat rattle will still be discernible. Their attack on Guffey would be that he was trying to set himself up as a Democratic Penrose.

The man some of the Republicans fear most, should he get the nomination, is Roland S. Morris, long prominent as a Pennsylvania Democrat, Ambassador to Japan during the Wilson administration and head of the Woodrow Wilson Foundation.

SWAG

Senator Bob Reynolds, who was elected as a winging wet from North Carolina, which later voted to retain the 18th Amendment, is worried about the revenue his and other dry states are going to lose.

As he sees it, it isn't just a question of the money people from dry territory spend buying whiskey in wet states. Reynolds's heart already is aching about all the gasoline and food and other things they'll purchase while on the thirst-quenching expedition.

Senator Bob is preparing some comprehensive data on the subject and plans to spring it soon.

ROUBLES

Former Mayor Jimmy Walker of New York does not spend his time loafing in Paris.

Long before the United States recognized Russia Jimmy was busy lining up several American firms who would like to trade with the bolsheviks. His relations with the Paris representatives of the Kremlin are more than cordial.

When the Russian manna starts flowing the Honorable James J. Walker will have a full-time business agent in New York.

LIFTED

As a result of the dry-cleaning Charles E. Mitchell and Albert H. Wiggin got before the Senate Banking Committee in connection with their financial and stock market operations, committee members have brushed off an old joke and trimmed it to fit the occasion. They are retelling it as follows:

Mitchell and Wiggin died and went to heaven. St. Peter answered their knock at the Pearly Gates, failed to recognize them and couldn't find their names in the chosen book.

At length St. Peter pardoned himself while he went inside and made further inquiries.

Twenty-five minutes later he returned. Mitchell and Wiggin had disappeared. So had the Pearly Gates.

NOTES

The Navy Department hears Japan is making elaborate preparations for naval maneuvers in the Pacific next year. . . . There is significance in this. . . . She is to parade her sea strength thusly once in four years but now it seems to have become an annual custom. . . . A group of Treasury officials went to the Bureau of Engraving and Printing the other day to inspect a new armored truck replete with defensive and offensive gadgets.

Inadvertently the rear door was left open during a tear gas demonstration and the interior of the truck was filled with the fumes. . . . After a good airing the officials were tendered a ride back to their offices in it. . . . Alas the seats folded down from the sides and had retained some of the gas and natural bouncing down the street did the rest.

NEW YORK

By James McMullin

Local insiders will tell you that Professor Rogers' star is rising in Washington while Professor Warren's is falling. Rogers has never been particularly keen on the Warren theory—although they have nominally worked together—and it may soon be his turn.

The main point at issue between them is that Warren believes the price of gold is the determining factor in commodity prices while Rogers holds that the sterling-dollar exchange rate since the trick charts compiled since the Warren gold program began seem to bear out the Rogers theory.

Warren's friends counter this evidence by saying that his system hasn't had a fair trial because actual gold purchases have been on too small a scale to count. They insist that aggressive buying would be necessary under the Rogers scheme if England is not to recapture a dominant position in the world currency markets.

WOOD-PULP
A plan with far-reaching effects on the wood-pulp industry will be introduced at the next session of Congress. Local insiders understand it has a good chance of going through.

The plan involves putting all our domestic wood-pulp companies out of business for ten years. Their employees would be taken over by the government to do reforestation instead of deforesting during that period. The companies themselves would be compensated by payments from the government equal to their average annual earnings for the past ten years with no effort required on their part.

Then the government would import wood-pulp from Russia to the extent of the average domestic production at a price equal to average domestic cost. These imports would not be paid for in cash but would be credited instead against the Kerensky or such other pre-Soviet debts as the Soviets choose to recognize. The Soviets would be persuaded to make this arrangement by concessions in other directions and it is understood that the matter was favorably discussed when Litvinoff was here.

Final step: the government sells its Russian wood-pulp at a price sufficient to cover the costs of the plan and probably cheaper than Canadian pulp.

Expected results:
1. Conservation of natural resources in the grand manner.
2. Recognition and part payment of debts everyone thought were dead.
3. The wheels of Russian trade speeded up.

4. American pulp companies to get more money for doing nothing than they have earned in the vast few years.

5. The labor involved to be employed in constructive projects.

6. The plan doesn't cost the government a penny (at least in theory), and

7. American newspapers will get their newsprint cheaper because the Canadians will have to lower prices to meet competition.

Which seems to leave everybody happy except the Canadians.

RUSSIA
Details of a new credit arrangement with Russia will probably be announced in a week or ten days. The Russian system which insists upon balancing cash imports and exports has prevented any growth of trade to date because we have shown no craving for Soviet goods.

Meanwhile the Russians are making a careful check-up because the articles they export and the articles we import from other countries. The object is to induce us to buy from them rather than from nations with less capacity for absorbing our products. For instance they would be delighted to establish an outlet here for their newly-founded silk industry at Japan's expense.

WHEAT
Farm circles say that the Argentine depreciation of currency is having wide repercussions on the wheat problem. It looks as if the Argentine is planning to use the lower peso as an excuse to disregard the world wheat agreement and sell her surplus harvest. This is estimated at about five million quarters more than her agreed allotment. Wheat experts say her only alternative would be destruction of superfluous grain.

FASCISM

Insiders are watching the growth of Fascism in Britain. Moseley, Black Shirt leader—claims a million followers and is out after Parliamentary politics again. It is believed that he will carry a number of seats in the next election.

ARMS

New York understands that Germany's big industrialists are focussing their attention on the possibilities of early war in the Far East. Their chief worry is that France and Britain may jostle them out of the arms market. If Germany cannot get a political agreement with France she wants at least an industrial agreement to divide up the Oriental arms trade. The industrialists are strengthening their control over the Nazi state and the necessity of opening up export markets is behind Germany's whole foreign policy at the moment.

PENAL

The new German penal code to be decreed shortly contains a provision unique in legal history. According to one section of the code a foreigner who by any action abroad (in his own country) violates the German political laws is to be regarded as a criminal and prosecuted the moment he sets foot on German soil. This means for instance that an American newspaper man who has written derogatory things about the Nazis in American newspapers would be sentenced to death if he visited Germany.

HONOR FORMER COMMANDERS OF S. A. LEGION

Annual past commanders night will be observed by Santa Ana Post No. 131, American Legion, at a special meeting at 8 o'clock to-night in Getty Hall on East Fourth street, it was announced today by Commander Charles D. Spinner.

Santa Ana post is unique in that it has all of its past commanders living, and they all still live in Santa Ana. At the meeting to-night each of them will give the history of the post under his predecessor.

Past commanders who will be honored, in order of their office, are Dr. John Wehrly, ex. Col. M. R. Wellington, Maurice Enderle, Franklin Grouard, Ed. T. McFadden, Wilbur Getty, G. K. Scovell, Jules Markel, Charles Van Wyk, Franklin West, Otto Jacobs, Hunter Leach, William H. Penn, Rodney Bacon and Judge J. B. Tucker.

The post has had four adjutants, who also will participate in the program to-night. These are Clyde C. Whitney, now of San Bernardino, Elmer Schaniel, Ed Kolbe and Art Eklund, present adjutant.

A musical and entertainment program will be presented and refreshments will be served at the conclusion of the meeting.

A date probably will be arranged for laying a cornerstone of the new Legion home on Birch street which now is being reconstructed.

FIND RUNAWAY GIRL. SOLUTION OF THEFT HERE

Clearing up the disappearance of a Culver City girl in October and the theft of clothing and money yesterday from the home of B. L. Wonder, 314 South Broadway, Miss Leona Roth, alias Janet Dixon, 15, was found last night in a Long Beach hotel with most of the loot in her possession.

Wonder reported to police yesterday that "Miss Dixon," who had been working at his home for the past six weeks, disappeared while the family was away from home. She left a note to Mr. and Mrs. Wonder, saying, "I hate to do this but things were getting too hot for me in this town. Goodbye, Leona."

The clue to the girl's real identity was given by the daughter of Wonder, who had mailed some Christmas cards for her friend and noticed one to a Mrs. Roth in Culver City. When the girl's mother got the card, she notified Santa Ana police Sunday that her daughter had been missing since October.

Police learned that the girl had taken a Santa Ana taxi to Long Beach, Mr. and Mrs. Wonder, the girl's mother and Long Beach police started searching homes last night and found the girl. She was taken home by her mother and Wonder indicated to police he would not sign a complaint against her. The stolen articles, including three dresses, two hats, one leather jacket, $31 in cash and a $2.50 gold piece, were returned this afternoon by police, with the exception of what money the girl had spent.

Former Resident Opens Office Here

Dr. Perry Davis, former resident of Santa Ana, is transferring from Hollywood to open dental offices at Tenth and Broadway in this city next Tuesday, he announced today. He will carry on the practice of Dr. Will Flood, who recently passed away.

Santa Ana's new doctor is a member of the American, Southern California and Los Angeles county dental associations, and is transferring his membership from the Los Angeles to the Orange County organization this week.

Dr. Davis attended grammar school here between 1908 and 1915, and is a graduate of Fullerton high school. Following his graduation from dental school, he has practiced his profession in Los Angeles and Hollywood.

HUEY

Huey Long says this business of an income tax case against him has been brought up 750 times and each time just before Congress was to convene.

Nevertheless there is a fair chance the government will make some move against the Louisiana Kingfish before March.

That is the month when the statute of limitations runs out on some of the Senator's returns that investigators think might be revived so the Federal Treasury would benefit by better than a quarter of a million dollars.

Washington expects the Kingfish to put up an exceptionally lusty squawk when the blow falls. Huey has an obvious defense. His Louisiana political empire has crumbled just about 100 per cent in the last two weeks and he can charge pure and unadulterated persecution by an unfriendly administration.

Officials here vehemently deny this. They say privately the word was passed over a month ago to press the investigation of Long's tax returns to a conclusion regardless of how the chips fall. One of Henry Morgenthau's first actions after taking over the Treasury was to order an exploratory operation reaching the heart.

This was before Huey's erstwhile lieutenants ran out on him—at least publicly. They had been getting their hand-bags ready for some weeks.

Federal sleuths first cast an eye on the method Long used in computing his taxable income back in the summer of 1932.

Ogden Mills, running the Treasury for Herbert Hoover, finally decided against action presumably because it then would have looked too much like political persecution.

Now, everybody being Democrats together, the bitter end is in sight. Nothing personal of course.

JUGGLERIES

Before the winter's snows melt some of our most nationally-known names are expected to be answering in court to explain away trick returns. These will include both Democrats and Republicans of first water.

Disclosures before the Senate stock market committee as to the slick way in which some of our wealthiest men juggled their incomes and paid anything from nothing to very little have riled the public considerably.

The Roosevelt administration so far has been detecting heart beats almost before they pulsate. Hence some big-shot prosecutions seem inevitable. When the populace turns a thumb down the emperor always orders blood.

DAVE

Word reaches Washington that Andy Mellon is just a wee bit worried about the chances of his Senatorial spokesman, David A. Reed, who comes up for reelection next year.

Pennsylvania as a Gibraltar of Republicanism is a fond memory. Last November's returns upset the G. O. P. chiefs from Pittsburgh to Philadelphia.

What they particularly fear next year is the prevailing national disposition to hang a haymaker on the rich man whenever possible. A punch at Reed would be the next best thing to reaching Mellon himself.

GUFFEY?

Just at present the Republicans are waiting anxiously to see whom the Democrats put up against Senator Reed.

They have heard that Joe Guffey, Democratic National Committeeman working overtime building up a state-wide Democratic machine, aspires to the nomination himself.

If so they'll breathe a little easier—although the throat rattle will still be discernible. Their attack on Guffey would be that he was trying to set himself up as a Democratic Penrose.

The man some of the Republicans fear most, should he get the nomination, is Roland E. Morris, long prominent as a Pennsylvania Democrat, Ambassador to Japan during the Wilson administration and head of the Woodrow Wilson Foundation.

SWAG

Senator Bob Reynolds, who was elected as a wringing wet from North Carolina, which later voted to retain the 18th Amendment, is worried about the revenue his and other dry states are going to lose.

As he sees it, it isn't just a question of the money people from dry territory spend buying whiskey in wet states. Reynolds' heart already is aching about all the gasoline and food and other things they'll purchase while on the thirst-quenching expedition.

Senator Bob is preparing some comprehensive data on the subject and plans to spring it soon.

ROUBLES

Former Mayor Jimmy Walker of New York does not spend his time loafing in Paris.

Long before the United States recognized Russia Jimmy was busy lining up several American firms who would like to trade with the bolsheviks. His relations with the Paris representatives of the Kremlin are more than cordial.

When the Russian manna starts flowing the Honorable James J. Walker will have a full-time business agent in New York.

LIFTED

As a result of the dry-cleaning Charles E. Mitchell and Albert H. Wiggin got before the Senate Banking Committee in connection with their financial and stock market operations, committee members have brushed off an old joke and trimmed it to fit the occasion. They are retelling it as follows:

Mitchell and Wiggin died and went to heaven. St. Peter answered their knock at the Pearly Gates, failed to recognize them and couldn't find their names in the chosen book.

At length St. Peter pardoned himself while he went inside and made further inquiries. Twenty-five minutes later he returned. Mitchell and Wiggin had disappeared. So had the Pearly Gates.

She used to parade her sea strength thusly once in four years but now it seems to have become an annual custom. . . . Inadvertently the rear door was left open during a tear gas demonstration and the interior of the truck was filled with the fumes. . . . STARS

Local insiders will tell you that Professor Rogers' star is rising in Washington while Professor Warren's is falling. Rogers has never been particularly keen on the Warren theory—although they have nominally worked together—and it may soon be his turn.

The main point at issue between them is that Warren believes the price of gold is the determining factor in commodity prices while Rogers holds that the sterling-dollar exchange rate does the trick. Charts compiled since the Warren gold program began seem to bear out the Rogers' theory.

Warren's friends counter this evidence by saying that his system hasn't had a fair trial because actual gold purchases have been on too small a scale to count. They insist that aggressive buying would be necessary under the Rogers scheme if England is not to recapture a dominant position in the world currency markets.

WOOD-PULP

A plan with far-reaching effects on the wood-pulp industry will be introduced at the next session of Congress. Local insiders understand it has a good chance of going through.

The plan involves putting all our domestic wood-pulp companies out of business for ten years. Their employees would be taken over by the government to do reforestation instead of deforesting during that period. The companies themselves would be compensated by payments from the government equal to their average annual earnings for the past ten years with no effort required on their part.

Then the government would import wood-pulp from Russia to the extent of the average domestic production at a price equal to average domestic cost. These imports would not be paid for in cash but would be credited instead against the Krensky or such other pre-Soviet debts as the Soviets choose to recognize. The Soviets would be persuaded to make this arrangement by concessions in other directions and it is understood that the matter was favorably discussed when Litvinoff was here.

Final step: the government sells its Russian wood-pulp at a price sufficient to cover the costs of the plan and probably cheaper than Canadian pulp.

Expected results:

1. Conservation of natural resources in the grand manner.
2. Recognition and part payment of debts everyone thought were dead.
3. The wheels of Russian trade speeded up.
4. American pulp companies to get more money for doing nothing than they have earned in the past few years.
5. The labor involved to be employed in constructive projects.
6. The plan doesn't cost the government a penny (at least in theory), and
7. American newspapers will get their newsprint cheaper because the Canadians will have to lower prices to meet competition.

Which seems to leave everybody happy except the Canadians.

RUSSIA

Details of a new credit arrangement with Russia will probably be announced in a week or ten days. The Russian system which insists upon balancing cash imports and exports has prevented any growth of trade to date because we have shown no craving for Soviet goods.

Meanwhile the Russians are making a careful check-up between the articles they export and the articles we import from other countries. The object is to induce us to buy from them rather than from nations with less capacity for absorbing our products. For instance they would be delighted to establish an outlet here for their newly-founded silk industry at Japan's expense.

WHEAT

Farm circles say that the Argentine depreciation of currency is having wide repercussions on the wheat problem. It looks as if the Argentine is planning to use the lower peso as an excuse to disregard the world wheat agreement and sell her surplus harvest. This is estimated at about five million quarters more than her agreed allotment. Wheat experts say her only alternative would be destruction of superfluous grain.

FASCISM

Insiders are watching the growth of Fascism in Britain. Mosley—Black Shirt leader—claims a million followers and is out after Parliamentary politics again. It is believed that he will carry a number of seats in the next election.

ARMS

New York understands that Germany's big industrialists are focusing their attention on the possibilities of early war in the Far East. Their chief worry is that France and Britain may jostle them out of the arms market. If Germany cannot get a political agreement with France she wants at least an industrial agreement to divide up the Oriental arms trade. The industrialists are strengthening their control over the Nazi state and the necessity of opening up export markets is behind Germany's whole foreign policy at the moment.

PENAL

The new German penal code to be decreed shortly contains a provision unique in legal history. According to one section of the code a foreigner who by any action abroad (in his own country) violates the German political laws is to be regarded as a criminal and prosecuted the moment he sets foot on German soil. This means for instance that an American newspaper man who has written derogatory things about the Nazis in American newspapers would be sentenced to death if he visited Germany.

Methodists To Consider Prohibition, War Training

COUNTY UNION MEETING TO BE HELD JAN. 4

Compulsory military training and development of a prohibition program are two of the principal questions to be discussed next Thursday afternoon and night at the 1934 winter meeting of the Orange County Methodist Union to be held in the First Methodist church of Santa Ana. Plans for the meeting were announced today by R. C. Patton of Orange, president of the union. E. M. Dozier, of Garden Grove, is secretary.

Four questions characterized as being of vital interest to all members of Methodist organizations will be discussed at a series of round table conferences scheduled to start at 4 p. m. Thursday. R. R. Lutes of Santa Ana will be chairman of the group discussing "What Shall We Do About War and Compulsory Military Training?"

The discussion leader for the same group will be the Rev. Russell Stroup of Newport Beach. Temperance leaders from all churches are urged to attend the conference on "What Shall We Do About the Liquor Problem?" Perry W. Mathis, of Anaheim, will be chairman for this conference and the Rev. E. Dow Hoffman, of Fullerton, will lead the discussion.

The Rev. Grover C. Ralston of Garden Grove will preside at a round table discussion on the problem of setting up a county-wide Methodist leadership training program. The discussion of this problem will be led by Patton.

Featuring the work of the Sunday school adult department, R. A. Chaffee of Garden Grove will preside as chairman at a conference on adult education. Dr. Jesse Lee Corley of Los Angeles, a member of the board of education of the Methodist church will be discussion leader.

The round table discussions will be followed by a basket dinner to be served at 6:30 p. m. in the church dining room.

During the dinner J. B. Wilbur of the Orange Y. M. C. A. will lead in group singing and Mr. Edwin Dunning will sing, accompanied at the piano by Mrs. Edwin Dunning. The dinner will be followed by a short business meeting.

Dr. Edward Laird Mills, editor of the Pacific Christian Advocate, San Francisco will deliver the address following the business session and Dr. George A. Warner, pastor of the First Methodist Church of Santa Ana will speak briefly presenting the program of the Southern California Conference in regard to the Mission work of the Foochow area of China. Dr. Harry Caldwell of Foothill will speak on "Our Parish Abroad."

RUMOR SALE OF WILSHIRE OIL TO SINCLAIR

Rumors are afloat in the oil field at Huntington Beach to the effect that Harry Sinclair and associates in the Sinclair Oil company have purchased the Wilshire Oil company from the Machris brothers, George and Al Machris, of Los Angeles. The Wilshire general offices and the offices of Harry Sinclair are both located in Los Angeles.

The sale is said to have been pending for several weeks, and that final terms of sale have been agreed on within the last week or two. The sale is said to include service stations owned by the company, one of its valuable assets, the refineries, tank farms and oil wells in Santa Fe Springs, Huntington Beach and other California fields.

The Wilshire is one of the strong independent companies which manufactures gasoline and all by-products of crude oil. It is one of the pioneer companies of the state and has always been noted as being absolutely independent and aloof in its management from all combines of major oil companies, according to reports from the beach oil fields.

Wilshire is reported as having been unsteady in its success as an oil operating company in the actual drilling of wells. It is credited with discovering oil in the town lot field at Huntington Beach and also discovered the deep sand at Santa Fe Springs, where it has choice holdings. At Huntington Beach the Wilshire bought its town lot lease holdings outright and has a potential production in the town lot field of many thousand barrels, said to be the largest potential producer in the town lot field there.

Navy Planes Roar Prelude to Hop Halfway Across Pacific

Six U. S. navy VP-10 flying boats will roar out of a California port in January for a hop halfway across the Pacific ocean, a jump of more than 2000 miles to Pearl Harbor, T. Kneffler McGinnis, who will direct the flight. At right are four of the crack planes, part of the squadron which made a 3292-mile one-stop hop from the Panama Canal zone to San Diego in the fall. CONTRACT BRIDGE

By J. GORDON ALLARD
Certified Culbertson Teacher

Last week in connection with the subject of leads I discussed briefly the rule of eleven. The following hand illustrates how a player may apply this simple yet very fundamental rule.

North: S-8, 7; H-9, 3, 2; D-A, Q, 10, 7, 4; C-K, J, 4.
West: S-A, 5, 4, 3; H-Q, 10, 8, (4); D-8, 6, 3, 2; C-Q.
East: S-Q, 7, 10, 6, 2; H-(K), 6, 5; D-K; C-8, 6, 5, 2.

(Note: Edward C. Wolf is the originator of this hand.)
South is the declarer at no-trump and West is the leader. West opens the four of hearts, the fourth best in that suit. Four from 11 leaves seven, and declarer can count three higher cards in his own hand and one in dummy, leaving East with three higher cards of the suit, and shows West with just four hearts.

Declarer has the option of establishing either clubs or diamonds. He selects the club suit in order to take the first trick with the king in dummy and finesse the jack through East. Because of the king-nine of spades and the jack-seven of hearts which East can lead through, declarer must keep the lead out of the East hand if possible.

When the queen of clubs falls on the first lead of clubs, declarer can make a perfect reading of both adversaries suit lengths as they stood at the beginning of the play as follows:

West: 4-4-4-1.
East: 5-4-4-1-3.

The reading is fairly obvious to an expert.

1. West opened a four-card suit as shown by the rule of eleven.

2. He held a singleton club as revealed by the fall of the queen on the first lead of clubs.

3. His other two suits must be divided 4-4 or he would have opened a five-card suit instead of the four-card heart suit.

4. If he holds four diamonds, East must hold a singleton as declarer and dummy together hold eight diamonds.

5. West's singleton club marks East with four clubs.

Declarer now leads the ace of diamonds from dummy in the hope that East's singleton is the king. Declarer makes 11 tricks. After winning the first trick, if declarer had led the jack of diamonds and finessed it up to East, the latter would have won the trick with his singleton king and led the queen of spades, in which event declarer would have taken a total of only four tricks.

Santa Ana City Band Rehearses; Seek New Members

Organized as an independent musical organization, the Santa Ana City band has started regular rehearsals under the direction of Ernest Tozier, formerly with Sousa's band and now supervisor of band instruction in the Fullerton Union High school.

Tozier is well-known in Orange county and has presented his student musicians in many programs and entertainments. He called the first rehearsal last practices. It was learned from Jack C. Houston, newly-appointed manager. A. D. Brownell, cornet soloist and former director of concert and military bands, has been named assistant director and Tom Mahan is assistant manager.

It is expected the group will be maintained with 50 members, while additional men are being accepted for a limited time. Applications may be sent to Houston, 1910 West Pine or to Mahan, 205 East St. Andrews place.

CAULIFLOWER GROWERS WILL MEET SATURDAY

Orange county cauliflower growers are being urged to attend a meeting to be held Saturday in the Farm Bureau office, 618 1-2 North Main street, for the purpose of discussing California proration of the coming crop. The meeting was called by H. D. Zimmer of Anaheim, chairman of the vegetable department of the Orange County Farm Bureau.

Cauliflower growers of the Santa Barbara area have requested the California Proration Commission to hold a hearing for their commodity in Santa Maria during the first week in January. At the same time they have requested Orange county growers to give them an expression of opinion and to cooperate if they so desire.

According to Assistant Farm Advisor Eric E. Eastman, the proration, if put into effect, will affect all growers irrespective of marketing affiliations, race or farm bureau membership. For that reason he is strongly urging Orange county growers to attend the Saturday meeting. Eastman said that the proration on cauliflower is being used as a test of the possibilities of the California Prorate law. He said that California cauliflower completely dominates the market, and therefore it is probably most suitable of all crops for proration.

Terms of the property agreement Mrs. McIntosh relinquishes all claim to the market or real estate in return for one automobile and a cash consideration.

3 SENTENCED ON CHARGES OF INTOXICATION

Eight persons appeared before Judge J. G. Mitchell in police court yesterday, including three men charged with drunkenness who were given 30-day suspended jail sentences with the provision that they shall not drink intoxicating liquor for six months.

Dallas Preble, 38, 1720 West Ninth street, who concluded a sentence for drunkenness on December 18, only to be re-arrested less than 10 days later on the same offense, was given a suspended sentence.

Robert P. McClelland, 43, who was released from the county jail on December 3 after serving a sentence for intoxication, also appeared before the court. He was given one of the 30-day suspended terms.

The third suspended sentence was given to Peter Larson, 41, 301 Fruit street.

William R. Graves, 18, Corona Del Mar student, was committed to the jail for three days on a speeding charge.

Clarence E. Dunn, charged with petty theft, was sentenced to serve 30 days in the county jail.

William Lowen, charged with defrauding an innkeeper, pleaded not guilty, waived a jury trial and had his hearing set for January 2 at 10 a. m.

J. Lyle Culp, Placentia, paid $5 of a $10 speeding fine and Joseph O. Costello, Hollywood, paid a $10 fine for speeding.

R. F. C. SCHOOL FUND REVERTS IF NOT USED

While the Santa Ana board of education already has signed a contract with the R. F. C. agreeing to take $615,000 allocated this city for reconstruction of earthquake damaged school buildings, the money can be returned in the event the board decides to do that if the voters decide against repairing the buildings at the plebiscite scheduled for January 23, according to George Newcom, business manager for the school board.

Newcom said that Vierling Kersy, head of the state department of education, has assured the board that the money may be returned with no charge for interest in the event the board abides by the ballot if the proposition is turned down by the voters. Under the contract signed by the board at the time the allocation was accepted, provision was made for annual payments on the amount borrowed.

In another clause in the contract it stipulates that the board of education can, at any time, pay any portion or the entire amount of the loan. The money if returned, however, will revert to the state and probably be returned to the federal government, Newcom said. It cannot be reapportioned to any other district, where it would be used, as allocation of all money under the $5,000,000 earthquake reconstruction loan from the federal government was completed on December 15.

How to Diagnose Your Own Case
LIE DOWN ON YOUR BACK, draw your stomach and intestines up into the chest as far as you can. Now press all over the abdomen with the points of the fingers and see if there are any SORE SPOTS. This simple investigation may mean much to you and your family, for SORE SPOTS IN THE ABDOMEN are not to be "laughed at." This is where "A stitch in time saves nine."

On examination a school girl is found to have a SORE SPOT just to the left of the Navel. Because of this she has Eczema, Vertigo and sharp pains. At her age this, if neglected, would most likely develop into Epilepsy.

Our business is to find and remove these causes and thus prevent and cure human ailments.

Compulsory military training and development of a prohibition program are two of the principal questions to be discussed next Thursday afternoon and night at the 1934 winter meeting of the Orange County Methodist Union to be held in the First Methodist church of Santa Ana. Plans for the meeting were announced today by R. C. Patton of Orange, president of the Union. E. M. Dozier, of Garden Grove, is secretary.

Four questions characterized as being of vital interest to all members of Methodist organizations will be discussed at a series of round table conferences scheduled to start at 4 p. m. Thursday. R. The round table discussions will be followed by a basket dinner to be served at 6:30 p. m. in the church dining room.

Dr. Edward Laird Mills, editor of the Pacific Christian Advocate, San Francisco, will deliver the address following the business session and Dr. George A. Warner, pastor of the First Methodist Church of Santa Ana will speak briefly presenting the program of the Southern California Conference in regard to the Mission work of the Foochow area of China. Dr. Harry Caldwell of Foochow will speak on "Our Parish Abroad."

RUMOR SALE OF WILSHIRE OIL TO SINCLAIR

Rumors are afloat in the oil field at Huntington Beach to the effect that Harry Sinclair and associates in the Sinclair Oil company have purchased the Wilshire Oil company from the Machrie brothers, George and Al Machrie, of Los Angeles. The Wilshire general offices and the offices of Harry Sinclair are both located in Los Angeles.

The sale is said to have been pending for several weeks, and that final terms of sale have been agreed on within the last week or two. The sale is said to include service stations owned by the company, one of its valuable assets, the refineries, tank farms and oil wells in Santa Fe Springs, Huntington Beach and other California fields.

The Wilshire is one of the strong independent companies which manufactures gasoline and all by-products of crude oil. It is one of the pioneer companies of the state and has always been noted as being absolutely independent and aloof in its management from all combines of major oil companies, according to reports from the beach oil fields.

Wilshire is reported as having been uncanny in its success as an oil operating company in the actual drilling of wells. It is credited with discovering oil in the town lot field at Huntington Beach and also discovered the deep sand at Santa Fe Springs, where it has choice holdings. At Huntington Beach the Wilshire bought its town lot lease holdings outright and has a potential production in the town lot field of many thousand barrels, said to be the largest potential producer in the town lot field there.

R. F. C. SCHOOL FUND REVERTS IF NOT USED

While the Santa Ana board of education already has signed contract with the R. F. C. agreeing to take $615,000 allocated to city for reconstruction of earthquake damaged school buildings the money can be returned in the event the board decides to do this if the voters decide against repaving the buildings at the plebiscite scheduled for January 23, according to George Newcom, business manager for the school board.

Newcom said that Vierling Keasey, head of the state department of education, has assured the board that the money may be returned with no charge for interest in the event the board adds by the ballot if the proposition turned down by the voters. Under the contract signed by the board at the time the allocation was accepted, provision was made for annual payments on the amount borrowed. In another clause in the contract it stipulated that the board of education at any time pay any portion of the entire amount of the loan.

The money if returned, however will revert to the state and probably be returned to the federal government, Newcom said. cannot be reappropriated to any other district where it would be used, as allocation of all money under the $5,000,000 earthquake reconstruction loan from the federal government was complete on December 15.

CONTRACT BRIDGE By J. GORDON ALLARD Certified Culbertson Teacher

Last week in connection with the subject of leads I discussed briefly the rule of eleven. The following hand illustrates how a player may apply this simple yet very fundamental rule.

North: S-8, 7, H-9, 3, 2, D-A, Q, 10, 7, 4; C-K, J, 4. West: S-A, 5, 4, 3; H-Q, 10, 8, (4); D-8, 6, 3, 2; C-Q. East: S-Q, J, 10, 6, 2; H-(K), 6, 5; D-K; C-8, 5, 2. (Note: Edward C. Wolf is the originator of this hand.)

South is the declarer at no-trump and West is the leader. West opens the four of hearts, the fourth best in that suit. Four from 11 leaves seven, and declarer can count three higher cards in his own hand and one in dummy, leaving East with three higher cards of the suit, and shows West with just four hearts.

Declarer has the option of establishing either clubs or diamonds. He selects the club suit in order to take the first trick with the king in dummy and finesse the jack through East. Because of the king-nine of spades and the jack-seven of hearts which East can lead through, declarer must keep the lead out of the East hand if possible.

When the queen of clubs falls on the first lead of clubs, declarer can make a perfect reading of both adversaries suit lengths as they stood at the beginning of the play as follows:

West: 4-4-1-3. East: 5-4-1-3. The reading is fairly obvious to an expert.

1. West opened a four-card suit as shown by the rule of eleven.

2. He held a singleton club as revealed by the fall of the queen on the first lead of clubs.

3. His other two suits must be divided 4-4 or he would have opened a five-card suit instead of the four-card heart suit.

4. If he holds four diamonds, East must hold a singleton as declarer and dummy together hold eight diamonds.

5. West's singleton club marks East with four clubs.

Declarer now leads the ace of diamonds from dummy in the hope that East's singleton is the king. Declarer makes 11 tricks. After winning the first trick, if declarer had led the jack of diamonds and finessed it up to East, the latter would have won the trick with his singleton king and led the queen of spades, in which event declarer would have taken a total of only four tricks. CAULIFLOWER GROWERS WILL MEET SATURDAY

Orange county cauliflower growers are being urged to attend a meeting to be held Saturday in the Farm Bureau office, 618 1-2 North Main street, for the purpose of discussing California proration of the coming crop. The meeting was called by H. D. Zimmer of Anaheim, chairman of the vegetable department of the Orange County Farm Bureau.

Cauliflower growers of the Santa Barbara area have requested the California Proration Commission to hold a hearing for their commodity in Santa Maria during the first week in January. At the same time they have requested Orange county growers to give them an expression of opinion and to cooperate if they so desire.

According to Assistant Farm Advisor Eric E. Eastman, the proration, if put into effect, will affect all growers irrespective of marketing affiliations, race or farm bureau membership. For that reason he is strongly urging Orange county growers to attend the Saturday meeting. Eastman said that the proration on cauliflower is being used as a test of the possibilities of the California Prorate law. He said that California cauliflower completely dominates the market, and therefore it is probably most suitable of all crops for proration.

Elks' Wives May Ask Guests to January Bridge Tea

Recalling the success of their December party as one of the pleasantest of the pre-Christmas socials, the wives of Santa Ana Elks are anticipating with a world of interest, the January event on Friday afternoon, January 5.

Plans as outlined today by Mrs. A. G. Flagg, general social chairman for the femininity of Elksdom, include a friendly hostess group composed of Mrs. Harold Brown and Mrs. V. L. Motry, wives of B. P. O. E. officers, Mrs. Walter Vandermast, Mrs. Gilbert P. Campbell and Mrs. E. K. Gerhardt, representing the general membership.

The party plans as introduced by the order, include the first Monday afternoon of each month, when the social rooms of the clubhouse are turned over to the feminine guests. But since the January date would be New Years, the party was advanced to Friday afternoon of the opening week of the new year.

Hostesses will arrange tables for both auction and contract bridge, and at the conclusion of play, plan to serve tea and home-made cake with a degree of formality. Elks' wives will be privileged to ask guests to share the afternoon, so it promises to be a gala affair of the late holidays.

Family Reunion

Christmas was an especially enjoyable occasion for Mr. and Mrs. Lucien Sweet, since the holidays brought together six of their sons and daughters with their families.

A Christmas eve party was held in the home of their daughter, Mrs. Jess Gubi, rural route, Santa Ana. The observance was continued on Christmas day when a delicious dinner was served to 23 relatives in the home of another daughter, Mrs. Sweet, Mrs. Fred McNeal, West Fifth street.

It was regretted that Mr. and Mrs. Sweet's son, Clyde Sweet, of Santa Rosa, Calif., and a daughter, Mrs. Lila Bingham of Spokane, Wash., could not join the family group.

First Lady Gives Away a Holiday Bride

Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt paid a flying visit to New York and gave away not only Christmas gifts but a bride as well. The bride, Mrs. June Hamilton Rhodes, a close friend of the Roosevelts, is here shown with her husband, Ferdinand D. Sanford, and the First Lady, after the ceremony. Still in her wedding finery of trailing blue velvet and white orchids, Mrs. Roosevelt later handed out toys to poor children at a local Christmas festival.

SANFORD-RHODES NUPTIALS AROUSE GENERAL INTEREST

No friends have awaited details of the wedding in New York City on Thursday, December 21, of June Hamilton Rhodes and Ferdinand Doan Sanford, with more interest than the many close friends of the bride here in Santa Ana, her former home, and in the whole Southland where she was so well known as publicity director for Ruth St. Denis, and for her prominence in music, art and social circles.

Since going to New York, June Hamilton Rhodes, daughter of Mrs. Edwin Hamilton, formerly of Santa Ana but now of Eagle Rock, has continued her career as publicity director, and is head of her own firm, June Hamilton Rhodes, Inc., with offices at 268 Fifth avenue.

Her wedding to the eastern capitalist occurred at 4:30 o'clock in the afternoon at East Eighty-Ninth Street Reformed Church, and was attended by an unusual number of notables in addition to Mrs. Franklin Delano Roosevelt, wife of the President.

The general interest aroused in the east by the function is indicated by the account of Mrs. Roosevelt's participation as given by Julia Blanshard in her syndicated column, "In New York."

In describing the rites, the columnist wrote: "Every now and then something happens to bring home how justifiable is the pride Americans have in their democracy. . . . The other day Mrs. Franklin Roosevelt gave away June Hamilton Rhodes at her wedding to Ferdinand D. Sanford and, aside from everybody's craning his neck almost to the breaking point, the simplicity of the whole affair was in no wise changed by having the First Lady present."

"Mrs. Roosevelt was quietly escorted to her place a few moments before the wedding march peaked forth. When the minister asked who gave this woman in marriage, Mrs. Roosevelt came forward and spoke in her natural, quiet tone. Then she stepped back and out of the picture, and the bride and groom became the center of attraction."

"After the procession had gone back up the aisle, Mrs. Roosevelt, on Charles Hanson Towne's arm, moved quickly and quietly out, stopped to embrace the bride and disappeared. Had this been any other country than America, with the First Lady talking part, the whole order of events would have been changed. Everybody would have had to rise when she entered. She would have had to leave first. It wouldn't have been the bride's triumph at all. . . . Particularly nice was the in-

All Members of Bethel Participate in Gay Party

Coming as a happy finale to a year of varied activities for Santa Ana, Bethel Job's Daughters was the party with which Mrs. V. J. Anderson and her daughter, Miss Fern Anderson, treasurer-elect of the organization, entertained last night in their home, 930 South Main street. The Bethel will begin its new term January 4 at joint installation ceremonies to be conducted with De Molays at 8 p. m. in Masonic temple.

A blazing fire on the hearth, glowing tapers placed about the rooms and such holiday appointments as holly, Christmas berries and poinsettias added to the home's expression of hospitality. There were many diversions for the young people, bridge, ping pong, billiards and dancing. Chocolates and popcorn were served throughout the evening, and marshmallows roasted by the girls proved especially inviting.

Refreshments of sandwiches, cake and coffee were served at small tables centered with red tapers. Mrs. A. J. Anderson of this city and Mrs. J. J. Hutchins of Orange assisted Mrs. V. J. Anderson at this time.

Those present were members of the Bethel's council, Mr. and Mrs. William Dean, Mr. and Mrs. R. H. Baker and Mr. and Mrs. George Wheeler, and Job's Daughters including the Misses Fern Anderson, Charlotte McCausland, Clarice Miller, Louise Rowland, Dora Perkins, Frankie McDonald, Pennington, Lenore McFarren, Audrey McDonald, Ruth Dohmer, Ruth Baker, Lorraine Wheeler, Lula Hutchins, Caroline Hills, Dorothy Carlson, Mary Jean Du Bois, Eloise Schrier, Mildred Pearson, Dorothy White, Letitia Morgan, Lucille Schreier, Mary Kettler, Virginia Mustel, Helen Pierce, Fern Farmer, Betty Hartman. Other guests of Mr. and Mrs. Anderson were Mr. and Mrs. J. J. Hutchins of Orange and Mrs. A. J. Anderson.

Large Crowd Gathered For Annual Dance of Panhellenic Group

Panhellenic Dance night. Gay groups of young people, the girls in filmy dance frocks, the young men in impeccable evening dress; formal dinners in advance of the dancing; friendly greetings among young people home from different universities for the holidays; the intoxicating rhythms of dance music floating on the air; vivid lights reflected from silvered Christmas trees; a general spirit of excitement and joyousness, all these were component parts of the successful 1933 version of one of the holidays' outstanding affairs, the annual Panhellenic dance for the Student Loan fund.

Held in Orange Women's clubhouse, the function attracted one of the largest crowds in the history of this annual gesture on the part of the value of the friendly contacts of the different college groups, the ball will have a more lasting effect in that it will enable the Panhellenic society to make a generous donation to the Student Loan fund.

Arousing special enthusiasm at intervals during the evening, were the different college songs played by Joe Lindbloom and his orchestra, each in turn dedicated to the campus where it is traditional.

Miss Reva Hawkins, Panhellenic president, and Mrs. Warren Fletcher, general chairman of the dance committee, were assisted by other committee chairmen and members, and by a group of patrons and patronesses including Mr. and Mrs. D. K. Hammond, Mr. and Mrs. Edward M. Nealey, Mr. and Mrs. John H. Sasmann, Mr. and Mrs. Northcross and Mr. and Mrs. Frank Henderson.

Pre-Dance Affairs

Among the many dinner parties preceding the Panhellenic dance, one of the largest was held at the Doris Kathryn, where some 70 or more merry-makers gathered for 7 o'clock dinner.

Crimson flowers and many candles formed table decorations, and place cards continued the Christmas theme suggested by a decorated tree.

With Harold Yost as master of ceremonies and Mrs. Henry Williams assisting as mistress of ceremonies, the affair was quite as enjoyable in its features, as the which inspired it. Mr. Yost was witty in the role of toastmaster, and there was a brief interval of after-dinner talks when Merle Hall, J. H. Daniger, Harold Fish, E. M. Sundquist, Paul Ragan and Harry LeBar spoke briefly and humorously, and Mrs. Williams responded to a request to tell of the aims of Panhellenic society in furthering the dance each year.

Couple Returns From Honeymoon to Make Home in Anaheim

Mr. and Mrs. William E. Waite, who have returned from a honeymoon trip to Palm Springs and other points to establish their home in Anaheim, are receiving congratulations from many in this community. The bride, the former Miss Mildred Beyl, is the daughter of Mrs. Mary Beyl of Hines, Calif., and Mr. Waite is the son of Mr. and Mrs. F. W. Waite of Fullerton.

The ceremony uniting the couple was a quiet event of Saturday, December 23 at 8 p. m. in the home of the officiating minister, the Rev. E. M. Elmquist, pastor of Riverside Lutheran church. The bride wore a semi-formal green frock with matching hat and nose veil, and a long strand of crystals. Her flowers were gardenias in a shoulder corsage.

Her sister, Mrs. Charles Johnson of Fullerton was matron of honor. She wore a grey costume with a gardenia corsage. Joe Wallen of Anaheim attended Mr. Waite as best man. Completing the little group present for the ceremony was Miss Virginia Stroup of Anaheim.

Mr. and Mrs. Waite left for their honeymoon trip, and now that they have returned are making their home in Anaheim where Mr. Waite is employed with the General Petroleum corporation. His bride has many friends in Santa Ana, where she has been in the employ of the McCoy Drug store at Fourth and Broadway for the past two years.

Santa Anans Welcome Easterners for Holidays

The cheerful jingling of sleigh bells brought a wintry Christmas spirit to the home of Mr. and Mrs. C. C. Langley, 892 Lacy street, where on Christmas Eve, the arrival of Mr. and Mrs. Albert E. Robinson and sons, Glenn, John and Gene, from Huron, S. D., was announced by the merry sound of the bells. The old sleigh bells had been used years ago by Mr. and Mrs. Edgar J. Miller, 802 Lacy street, in whose home the eastern visitors spent part of the holidays.

The evening was spent around a gayly lighted Christmas tree in the Langley home, the family group sharing with baby Gene Robinson the joys of his first Christmas. On Christmas day Mr. and Mrs. Langley and daughter, Miss Ruth Langley, entertained with a turkey dinner in their home, Santa Claus and his reindeer covered with snow formed the table centerpiece, while tall red tapers lent a soft glow to the pretty scene. Pepper boughs and eucalyptus blossoms used in decorating the home, made it a truly Californian Christmas for the eastern visitors. The afternoon and evening were spent in singing old favorite songs and enjoying the violin selections of Jack Langley, son of the home, and Master Glenn Robinson.

Those participating in the family reunion, in addition to the hosts, Mr. and Mrs. C. C. Langley and Miss Ruth Langley, were Mr. and Mrs. E. J. Miller, Mr. and Mrs. Norbert E. Lenz and son Donald, Mr. and Mrs. William Jerome, Mr. and Mrs. Jack C. Langley, Mr. and Mrs. Albert E. Robinson and sons, Glenn, John and Gene, and Robert R. Low of Los Angeles.

Mrs. Robinson is a niece of Mrs. Langley and Mr. Miller. After spending a few days in the home of Mr. and Mrs. Miller, they will continue on to Salem, Ore., where they will make their new home.

YOU and your Friends

Phi Theta Chi sorority of this city held its annual holiday dance last night in the Blossom room of Hotel Roosevelt in Hollywood. Nine couples attended, including Miss Alberta Green and Jack Crawford, special guests of the organization. Miss Dorothy Johnson is president of the sorority.

Mr. and Mrs. Jesse Albright, 718 South Spurgeon street, are enjoying a holiday visit from their son, Harold L. Albright, who with Mrs. Albright and their little daughter Barbara Jean, are here from Berkeley. It was little Barbara Jean's first Christmas with her grandparents, and was celebrated accordingly, with a heavily laden tree, a turkey dinner and all traditional features.

ANN MEREDITH'S MIXING BOWL
EAT AND GROW SLIM
Breakfast
1-2 grapefruit
1 shredded wheat biscuit
1-2 cup milk
1 tsp. sugar
1 cup coffee with
1-4 cup hot skim milk.
Calory value, 335.

Seeing "Little Women," that delightful story of other days, brought to mind some of my own harum-scarum pranks which were runners-up for Jo's messes. Winter days . . . too much animal spirit . . . and a closed in stair of the type Easterners will remember, made me conceive the brilliant idea of taking my moth-er's best tea tray and using it to coast down the perilous slopes of that closed in Mt. Blanc. I landed with a wild bang at the stair door, the big tray on top of me, dented almost beyond repair. By then my mother had arrived on the scene to pick up the pieces and was so enraged that I carried around a corpus oluteum muscle which made standing up or sleeping on my tummy an imperative necessity for a full week.

I think that such vivid memories make more understanding mothers; that's my personal view point. What do you think?

Speaking about those big old trays, you can do marvelous things with a pot of paint and one of those big trays. I usually find mine on one of my junking expeditions but they can be bought new if you have a yen to spend good money. Scrub well and give the tray a priming coat. When dry brush it with the shade of lacquer to be used, dry again, and give another coat. Decorate as you please or leave plain. Plain Chinese red lacquer makes a stunning tray.

TODAY'S RECIPE

Broiled Salmon Slices
Brush slices of salmon with butter and broil 15-20 minutes without turning. Slip the slices out of the broiling pan onto a hot ovenware platter (broiled side down) and between the slices place thin slices of hard cooked egg and a little white sauce. Over the salmon slices spread 2 Tbsp. of buttered crumbs and slip into the hot oven until the crumbs have browned.

Spinach Timbales
Wash and cook spinach (2 pounds) in as little water as possible. When well cooked, drain and chop very fine. Add a little salt, 1-2 tsp. sugar, a pinch of nutmeg and pepper, and beaten yolks of 3 eggs. Put over the heat, stir constantly until heated and thoroughly mixed. Turn into buttered moulds, place moulds in a pan of hot water and cook in a low oven 15 minutes. Water must not boil in the pan. Unmould, arrange around the browned salmon and serve.

—Contributed Recipe.
A half slice of salmon (average serving) and a spinach timbale will have an approximate calory value of 400.

This is one of the recipes sent in exchange for the Calory Diet. Send in one of your pet recipes and a stamped, self-addressed envelope and receive a copy of my Calory List, in which you will find 330 kinds of every-day foods listed in quantities we use ordinarily.

MANY SENATORS OF ABILITY

We have, from time to time, called attention to the general disposition of writers and speakers to minimize the ability of members of Congress. An illustration is seen this morning in a statement by Harry Carr, declaring that there is no man of ability in either house of Congress today.

We want to challenge that statement. We believe there are outstanding men in our national legislative body today, who are equal to any men who have ever graced our national halls. To be sure, we are likely to think of outstanding men, such as Webster, Calhoun and Charles Sumner, as being unequalled by any men since their time. But, in our judgment, that comes from an exaggerated imagination.

Those men were able men. They discussed issues that were germane to that day with intellectual acumen, with broad understanding and with oratorical ability. But the intellectual standards, the sum of human knowledge at that time, hardly began to compare with what men must know now to hold such positions as those men held in those days.

We submit that Senator Borah in the Senate and James Beck in the House are two as outstanding Constitutional lawyers as we have had in this country. If we would search the record of the bar, there is probably no one, with the possible exception of Elihu Root, upon whom any number of attorneys would agree, as one to surpass the ability of Senator Borah, and Mr. Root, of course, has passed the age when he could take his place in the United States Senate.

Senator Fess of Ohio is an able man, a thorough student of history, and an outstanding statesman. Senator Norris of Nebraska, and our two Senators from California are men not to be discounted in comparison with any men of the past. We may not agree with them in their ideas, but certainly a man who has done what Senator Johnson has done in and for his state, in the way of public service, showing a knowledge of a situation, and the ability to bring things to pass, places him in the forefront of able men of the nation.

The same is true of Senator McAdoo. Look at his life! It shows a man of vision, ability and achievement. The tremendous undertaking of the McAdoo tunnels would have been enough to have given him great, and to a degree, permanent fame, but added to that was the service that he rendered during the World war at the head of the Treasury department, at the head of the railroads and in other important relationships, which proved him to be a man of outstanding ability, with a keen mind, and a statesman of a very high order.

There are other men whose names could be listed, but we submit that simply because there are some who ought not to be there, and who are intellectually impossible, we should not cheaply discount the character and type of men who are the leaders in our United States Senate. Some of these men have achieved things in the face of great opposition, and these men today, who are leaders in both houses of Congress, are handicapped by great chains of power in our radio stations and newspapers, not only educating the people and informing them, and throwing the searchlight upon all matters, but oftentimes using their influence to deceive the people in respect to the very ideas which these leaders have, when such newspapers desire to defeat them.

We are afraid that Mr. Carr has gotten his conception of the ability of many of these men from those who are out of harmony with their purposes. We may disagree as to the purposes of men, but, after all, in intellectual powers and in ability to bring things to pass, they may be equal to those of other days. Alexander Hamilton and Thomas Jefferson each has a permanent place in the archives of American history, and upon no two points that we now recall, did these two statesmen agree.

NEW YORK CLEARING HOUSE HAS MORAL OBLIGATION

The depositors of the closed Harriman bank are suing the Clearing House of New York for damages resulting from the closing of the Harriman bank. While we do not know the legal status of this case, and would not for a moment attempt to prophesy as to its outcome, yet, in the light of certain facts, as they came out in the public journals, there should be some redress for those who have lost in the Harriman bank.

When the rumors became generally rife that the Harriman bank was weak, and that great drafts were being made upon it, it will be recalled that public advertisements were made, in which there was moral guarantee made by the New York Clearing House, insisting that the Harriman bank was sound, and that people could trust it. Whether this amounted to a legal obligation, it certainly did amount to a moral obligation.

A Clearing House organization should not be permitted to mislead the public to the extent of inducing them to deposit their funds in an institution which at the very time is insolvent. They may have been acting under advice of attorneys, so that they were within the law, but we would not be surprised if a court of equity, before which this matter will come, would judge them responsible. And certainly if that is not true, there should be legislation enacted, so as to place responsibility upon such an institution.

The public, which is ignorant of conditions, should be protected from an institution which only owes its existence to the rules and laws that society has enacted.

A COURAGEOUS MAN

Maxwell Arnow, Hollywood movie director, has outlasted Prof. Fisher who the other day made public a list of the nineteen men in the whole world whom he believes understand money. Mr. Arnow listed the ten brainiest women in Hollywood, according to his alleged judgment. Can the stars who are not on the list "laugh that off?" Mr. Arnow is quite young so there is time for him to revise his judgment and those on the list have hope of impressing him with their brains, if they care to do so. At any rate there is hope for those not included, to work on Mr. Arnow. His basis for judgment, however, is interesting. The women he has selected he says know what they want, and they know what to do with what they wanted when they get it. Arnow's selections on this basis were Aileen MacMahon, Ann Harding, Helen Hayes, Kay Francis, Diana Wynward, Miriam Hopkins, Katharine Hepburn, Jean Muir, Karen Morley and Mary Boland.

It may be that some of the stars who are not on the list know what they want and are going after it in just as determined a fashion as these ten but without letting Arnow know what they want. Such a woman should be double starred, on Arnow's own basis for judgment.

ORANGE COUNTY RANCHERS RECEIVE LOANS

During the past ten days Orange County ranchers have received in loans over $131,000. This makes a total of $210,000 received, all but $90,000 of it being received very recently. More applications have been O. K'd and relief will undoubtedly mount greatly as the days go on.

As we know the facts concerning this whole matter, we cannot help emphasizing that the men who have been bringing Orange County's needs and the delays to the attention of the loaning authorities and the government have performed a great service for Orange county. It is unnecessary to go into details or to emphasize delinquencies, because, after all, the purpose of those who were working was to bring the very condition about, which seems to have been brought about, and it is impossible to say just exactly what all the reasons for the delay were. But, in any case, Orange county apparently is getting its part now and we hope that this condition will continue.

Peanuts and Parks

Christian Science Monitor

Consider the peanut, how small it is. Something, too, there is about its diminutiveness, when used as a comparison, that does not engender the quality of affection as do many small objects, but rather a tendency to risibility. Adoring admirers of the new baby, for instance, may go as far as they like with "precious little blossom" or "darling sugar-plum" but the tactful visitor will refrain from any reference to peanut.

But pause and learn the importance of the peanut. This is no statistical article to impress the reader with the fact that the United States alone produces yearly 750,000,000 pounds of this lowly groundnut, which is not a nut, anyway, but a vegetable. What is much more to the point is that its consumption may yet affect the destiny of public parks in America.

The rumor floats that guardians of the little pushcarts with the wheezy wappas, concessionaire in New York's Central Park, who pays the city annual tribute of $16,000 for the exclusive privilege of dispensing the commodity in the park, petitions for reduction of rent, thus reducing the park's revenue. The prospect grows alarming. If parks without peanuts are unthinkable, what shall be thought of the possibility of no peanuts and no parks?

It has been said of the peanut that it affords food for the adult on holidays, for monkeys in captivity and for children at all times. In the southern portion of the United States it is called a "goober." Lead a pickaninny to a field where he can uproot goobers to his heart's content and supplement his joy with a stalk of sugar-cane to suck and you have given him not the necessities of sustenance but the utmost in gastronomic rapacity.

English schoolboys call them monkeynuts and one of the unexplainable phenomena of adolescence is the astounding amount of monkeynuts and dannon tarts, washed down with a weird concoction of frothy, charged, spicy water known as gingerbeer, which a small boy can consume when he guides a visiting indulgent uncle to a "tuck-shop" within school bounds.

Long may the arachis hypogaea, alias earthnut, alias monkeynut, alias groundnut, alias pistache de terre (in Gallic lands), alias peanut, reign and dance to the merry tune of the pushcart vendor's whistle.

Son of Dickens

Oakland Tribune

Sir Henry Dickens was never one to capitalize upon the name of his distinguished father. Indeed, it was not until a biographer presented the creator of "Pickwick" and great novelist in lights rather outside of the accepted picture, that the son took up in defense. He did more than that: he went to law and possibly because he was a lawyer himself won a case which silenced the critic.

Sir Henry died at the approach of a season his father loved so well, a learned attorney who would not have been inconspicuous had there been no glamor to his name. His three daughters and three sons are promise that the strain of a man whose books are among the most vigorous and lasting in the language, and who created more popular characters than any writer since Shakespeare, will be carried on.

The Joke Is on Us.

San Francisco Chronicle

An unexpected threat to Nordic supremacy arises from the recognition of Russia. The University of Michigan, spurred by prospects of trade activity, announces that Russian language will be added to its commercial courses.

This may sound harmless enough. But those who have heard Russians conversing have hinted that there is no such language—that it just a collection of sounds that Russians make to conceal the fact that they are communicating thoughts by telepathy.

And if there be such a language it is generally conceded that none but a Russian can possibly hope to learn it. Are we to be shown up, that 100,000,000 Russians are able to do what we cannot do?

The Balloon Ascension Will Be Temporarily Postponed

More Truth Than Poetry

By James J. Montague

FAME

Whenever a dull feudal baron,
Who possessed little wit of his own,
Was keen that acclaim
Should attach to his name
So he might become widely well known,
He employed a bright rhyme-writing minstrel,
(There were many such boys in those days)
A zither to twang
While he busily sang
His thick-witted principal's praise.

The populace eagerly listened
While these venal barons strolled about,
And never demurred
At a word that was heard
As the subsidized epic rang out.
And many a fat-headed noble
Through the years has been widely admired
By the unthinking throng
Just because of the song
That was sung by the minstrel he hired.

However, if one lacks the talent
To waken the cheers of the mob
While it watches him rise,
I believe he is wise
To put some one else on the job.
Fame is fame however one gets it,
Go and earn it yourself, if you can,
And if you cannot
Don't bewail you're hard lot,
Just employ a publicity man.

Thoughts On Modern Life

By GLENN FRANK

A REVOLUTION IN STANDARDS

One of the most popular commentators on the passing show of public affairs undertook the other day to explore the question of whether the emergency legislation of the Roosevelt regime is effecting a revolution. He came to the conclusion that Roosevelt does not spell Revolution. If we had not been in dire straits last March, he concluded, Congress would not have passed the drastic emergency measures it did. As soon as we become prosperous again he believes Congress will repeal these measures.

The devil is sick, the devil is well, the devil is a monk is he! I am aware that a profound insight into the perversity of human nature lies back of this ancient adage. But I do not think, as this commentator evidently does, that the old maxim covers the current case.

It may well be that Congress passed the drastic emergency measure of last March under the counsel of despair. It may well be that powerful pressure toward recession from these particular measures will show up the moment the economic tension lets up. But behind, beneath and beyond any and all of the specific measures shoved through Congress by the Roosevelt leadership a real revolution in standards is going on, in the American mind.

I run all the risks of prophecy and say with confidence that never again in our lifetime will sheer financial accumulation and the display which money can buy bring the prestige it brought in the days behind us. We are at a turn in the road leading to a phase of our maturing national life in which men's prestige will rest more and more upon the social significance of their careers.

Mr. Roosevelt has not caused this change by his preachments, prophetic as they have been. He has but given voice to a change that events themselves have forced. This change has really come about for the simple reason that the joy has gone out of splurging. I find business men, who a few years ago were riding in extravagantly elaborate foreign cars, today riding in far simpler models, indistinguishable from a hundred and one cars they pass on the streets, not because they cannot still afford the most elaborate automobiles which are lying idle in their garages, but because they feel easier in their minds using the simpler ones. I find women leaving priceless jewels in vaults and going more simply adorned to social functions, not solely or even primarily because they are afraid a gangster might rob them, but because they feel easier in their minds without them. I am sure all this is more than a passing phase of fear. It is the culmination of a revolution in standards.

I repeat: Not within our lifetimes will men and women find joy in splurging while hunger haunts any part of our population. Men of business, industry and finance have heretofore clamored and intrigued for swollen fortune because these were the symbols of power, and men will always hunger for power. The next phase of our evolution will see prestige come to men of business, industry and finance because they have made the economic machine bring increase, enrichment and stabilization of life for the millions. The power of the business leader of the future will be the same sort of power that mankind willingly puts into the hands of the great statesman.

It is this spiritual revolution now upon us that will make possible permanent and productive change in the policies and procedures of our economic life. Copyright, 1933, McClure Newspaper Syn.

Our Children

By Angelo Patri

KINDNESS

If you would succeed with children be kind to them. That does not mean loading them down with gifts, handing them everything they think they want, making monkeys of them. Spoiling children, giving them false notions about life and themselves in relation to it, is about the most unkind thing you can do to them. A spoiled child has been robbed of his childhood and that is tragic. No, I mean being truly kind to children.

If you want to help a child you must like him. You cannot be kind to him unless you have that warm feeling in your heart for him that makes you wish him well wherever he goes and what he does. You like him when he breaks things, you like him when he says what you write to hear him say, you like him when he disappoints you. You can be kind to him without effort then, and that is the only way you can ever be kind to a child. He detects the forced tone and the cool smile and the grudging word. They hurt him. So first, like the child you want to help. If you can't like him get out of his way.

When you like a child you can find it in your heart to forgive his mistakes and praise his good points. At once the child feels your kindness and responds. He will turn to you, to the warmth of your kindly spirit as the flowers turn toward the sun that warms and nourishes them. Then you can say what you want to say to him and he will listen. "I like Miss Abbott. She is kind to me. She tells me when I make a mistake but she doesn't go up in the air about it."

There speaks the child who felt the kindness of the teacher behind her criticisms. He knew she liked him, was for him, as he puts it. The teacher who never spoke to him in the halls, who looked coldly at him when she called him to recite, who said, "As usual," in icy tones when he stumbled in recitations, who called across the study hall, "Take that coat off that seat. You're not the only one in the room, you know," did not like him, was unkind to him, and he knew it and did poorer work for her than for anybody else. You can't be kind to a child you dislike. And he knows it.

Jack was hurrying toward the front door when Nora, the cook, appeared at the side entrance and beckoned him around the back way. "Go softly. Your Aunt Ellen is in the living room with your mother and a strange lady that I never saw before. Slip up the back stairs and make yourself presentable for they're going to ask for you. Change your clothes and remember your nails and your good shoes. Be smart now for you've no time. If they ever saw you like this—there'd be murder."

Now that was kind. Jack was in what his aunt called "a state." His hair was tousled past belief, his stockings were coated with mud, and his shoes were the color of the football field where he had been rolling for the past hour, without permission. Nora liked Jack and maybe he didn't like Nora?

Children respond so cordially to kindness. It is like the breath of life to their spirits. A kind word, an encouraging smile, a lift over a hard place, and the child is devoted to you for life. If you have never experienced that devotion you can't know the sweetest emotion that life offers the careworn, world-weary soul.

(Mr. Patri will give personal attention to inquiries from parents and school teachers on the care and development of children. Write him in care of this paper, enclosing a three-cent stamped addressed envelope for reply.) (Copyright, 1933, The Bell Syn., Inc.)

In the Long Ago

From The Register Files
14 Years Ago Today

DECEMBER 28, 1919

Completion of a large property deal at Irvine saw the transfer of the 130-acre tract of land owned by Alex Jeffrey to Walter Cook and Barney Chindard. The new owners paid approximately $230,000 for the tract. About 40 acres were in citrus fruits and the remainder in walnuts.

Thirty-three new residents had been added to Santa Ana and vicinity in the winter months by the location here of Leroy Hall, former banker of Crawford, Neb., who had purchased the Babson home on North Main street. His daughter and niece, Mrs. Maude H. Chase, an artist, and Miss Prudence Macomber, drama and expression teacher, had purchased property, and several sons with their families had located in the city or vicinity, all planning to make this a permanent home.

GUILD ELECTS TOASTMASTERS OFFICERS AT DISCUSS XMAS ANNUAL MEET DECORATIONS

ANAHEIM, Dec. 28.—While the St. Agnes Guild group entertains at numerous parties throughout the year, perhaps one of the most enjoyable is the annual Christmas party that is held for members only and also is the occasion for election of officers and at the affair last night Miss Kathryn Adams was named directress, having served successfully in the capacity of treasurer during the past year.

The bridge party was held at the home of Miss Adams, 515 North Clementine street. Assistant hostesses were Miss Dorothy Yungbluth, Mrs. O. P. Rust, Mrs. Clyde Cromer and Mrs. Harry Horn.

Other officers elected were Mrs. Harry Horn, vice-directress; Mrs. Earl Jackson, secretary; Mrs. Clyde Daniels, treasurer; Mrs. Victor Loh, historian and Miss Freda Lundson (retiring directress) and Miss Dorothy Yungbluth, directors.

A lighted Christmas tree and open fire lent a festive note to the rooms while bowls of poinsettias, greenery and red tapers completed the decorations. At the supper hour the bridge tables were set with cloths stressing the yuletide motif and centered with red tapers and cotoneaster berries.

Awards for high scores went to Miss Helen Grafton, first, who received six tapers in green and yellow; Mrs. Ralph Maass, second, who received a teapot holder and Mrs. Harry Wilhelm, third, who received two small pictures.

Besides the hostesses those present were the Misses Martha Adams, Norma Brastad, Maude Dent, Marty Easton, Honor Easton, Helen Grafton, Stella Jackson, Freda Lundson, Madeline Lundson, and Dorothy Yungbluth and the Mesdames Rodney Brastad, Clyde Cromer, Clyde Daniels, D. Howard Dow, Doris Dykeman, Robert Easton, Cortez Hoskins, Victor Loh, Ralph Maass, Robert Rundstrom, Helen Thompson, J. A. Wallace, and Harry Wilhelm.

ANAHEIM P. E. O. IN ANNUAL GATHERING

ANAHEIM, Dec. 28.—Back to the good old days in costume and setting featured the annual Christmas party of the local P. E. O. chapter that was held last night at the home of Mrs. Harpster on Nursery avenue.

A dinner was served at 6:30 o'clock, the long table being set with old fashioned dishes and silverware and bringing back memories of days gone by. In the evening a brief business meeting was held after which stunts and Christmas games were played. Mrs. Charlotte Young was chairman of the evening, assisted by Mrs. Hazel Powell and Mrs. Edith Evanston.

MANY SENATORS OF ABILITY

We have, from time to time, called attention to the general disposition of writers and speakers to minimize the ability of members of Congress. An illustration is seen this morning in a statement by Harry Carr, declaring that there is no man of ability in either house of Congress today.

We want to challenge that statement. We believe there are outstanding men in our national legislative body today, who are equal to any men who have ever graced our national halls. To be sure, we are likely to think of outstanding men, such as Webster, Calhoun and Charles Sumner, as being unequalled by any men since their time. But, in our judgment, that comes from an exaggerated imagination.

Those men were able men. They discussed issues that were germane to that day with intellectual acumen, with broad understanding and with oratorical ability. But the intellectual standards, the sum of human knowledge at that time, hardly began to compare with what men must know now to hold such positions as those men held in those days.

We submit that Senator Borah in the Senate and James Beck in the House are two as outstanding Constitutional lawyers as we have had in this country. If we would search the record of the bar, there is probably no one, with the possible exception of Elihu Root, upon whom any number of attorneys would agree, as one to surpass the ability of Senator Borah, and Mr. Root, of course, has passed the age when he could take his place in the United States Senate.

Senator Fess of Ohio is an able man, a thorough student of history, and an outstanding statesman. Senator Norris of Nebraska, and our two Senators from California are men not to be discounted in comparison with any men of the past. We may not agree with them in their ideas, but certainly a man who has done what Senator Johnson has done in and for his state, in the way of public service, showing a knowledge of a situation, and the ability to bring things to pass, places him in the forefront of able men of the nation.

The same is true of Senator McAdoo. Look at his life! It shows a man of vision, ability and achievement. The tremendous undertaking of the McAdoo tunnels would have been enough to have given him great, and, to a degree, permanent fame, but added to that was the service that he rendered during the World war at the head of the Treasury department, at the head of the railroads and in other important relationships, which proved him to be a man of outstanding ability, with a keen mind, and a statesman of a very high order.

There are other men whose names could be listed, but we submit that simply because there are some who ought not to be there, and who are intellectually impossible, we should not cheaply discount the character and type of men who are the leaders in our United States Senate. Some of these men have achieved things in the face of great opposition, and these men today, who are leaders in both houses of Congress, are handicapped by great chains of power in our radio stations and newspapers, not only educating the people and informing them, and throwing the searchlight upon all matters, but oftentimes using their influence to deceive the people in respect to the very ideas which these leaders have, when such newspapers desire to defeat them.

We are afraid that Mr. Carr has gotten his conception of the ability of many of these men from those who are out of harmony with their purposes. We may disagree as to the purposes of men, but, after all, in intellectual powers and in ability to bring things to pass, they may be equal to those of other days. Alexander Hamilton and Thomas Jefferson each has a permanent place in the archives of American history, and upon no two points that we now recall, did these two statesmen agree.

NEW YORK CLEARING HOUSE HAS MORAL OBLIGATION

The depositors of the closed Harriman bank are suing the Clearing House of New York for damages resulting from the closing of the Harriman bank. While we do not know the legal status of this case, and would not for a moment attempt to prophesy as to its outcome, yet, in the light of certain facts, as they came out in the public journals, there should be some redress for those who have lost in the Harriman bank.

When the rumors became generally rife that the Harriman bank was weak, and that great drafts were being made upon it, it will be recalled that public advertisements were made, in which there was moral guarantee made by the New York Clearing House, insisting that the Harriman bank was sound, and that people could trust it. Whether this amounted to a legal obligation, it certainly did amount to a moral obligation.

A Clearing House organization should not be permitted to mislead the public to the extent of inducing them to deposit their funds in an institution which at the very time is insolvent. They may have been acting under advice of attorneys, so that they were within the law, but we would not be surprised if a court of equity, before which this matter will come, would judge them responsible. And certainly if that is not true, there should be legislation enacted, so as to place responsibility upon such an institution.

The public, which is ignorant of conditions, should be protected from an institution which only owes its existence to the rules and laws that society has enacted.

A COURAGEOUS MAN

Maxwell Arnow, Hollywood movie director, has outclassed Prof. Fisher who the other day made public a list of the nineteen men in the whole world whom he believes understand money. Mr. Arnow listed the ten brainiest women in Hollywood, according to his alleged judgment. Can the stars who are not on the list "laugh that off?" Mr. Arnow is quite young so there is time for him to revise his judgment and those on the list have hope of impressing him with their brains, if they care to do so. At any rate there is hope for those not included, to work on Mr. Arnow. His basis for judgment, however, is interesting. The women he has selected he says know what they want, and they know what to do with what they wanted when they get it. Arnow's selections on this basis were Aileen MacMahon, Ann Harding, Helen Hayes, Kay Francis, Diana Wynward, Miriam Hopkins, Katharine Hepburn, Jean Muir, Karen Morley and Mary Boland.

It may be that some of the stars who are not on the list know what they want and are going after it in just as determined a fashion as these ten but without letting Arnow know what they want. Such a woman should be double starred, on Arnow's own basis for judgment.

ORANGE COUNTY RANCHERS RECEIVE LOANS

During the past ten days Orange County ranchers have received in loans over $131,000. This makes a total of $210,000 received, all but $90,000 of it being received very recently. More applications have been O. K'd and relief will undoubtedly mount greatly as the days go on.

As we know the facts concerning this whole matter, we cannot help emphasizing that the men who have been bringing Orange County's needs and the delays to the attention of the loaning authorities and the government have performed a great service for Orange county. It is unnecessary to go into details or to emphasize delinquencies, because, after all, the purpose of those who were working was to bring the very condition about, which seems to have been brought about, and it is impossible to say just exactly what all the reasons for the delay were. But, in any case, Orange county apparently is getting its part now and we hope that this condition will continue.

Peanuts and Parks

Christian Science Monitor

Consider the peanut, how small it is. Something, too, there is about its diminutiveness, when used as a comparison, that does not engender the quality of affection as do many small objects, but rather a tendency to risibility. Adoring admirers of the new baby, for instance, may go as far as they like with "precious little blossom" or "darling sugar-plum" but the tactful visitor will refrain from any reference to peanut.

But pause and learn the importance of the peanut. This is no statistical article to impress the reader with the fact that the United States alone produces yearly 750,000,000 pounds of this lowly groundnut which is not a nut, anyway, but a vegetable. What is much more to the point is that its consumption may yet affect the destiny of public parks in America.

The rumor floats that guardians of the little pushcarts with the wheezy whistle report a decrease in sales. One Peter Pappas, concessionaire in New York's Central Park, who pays the city annual tribute of $16,000 for the exclusive privilege of dispensing the commodity in the park, petitions for reduction of rent, thus reducing the park's revenue. The prospect grows alarming. If parks without peanuts are unthinkable, what shall be thought of the possibility of no peanuts and no parks?

It has been said of the peanut that it affords food for the adult on holidays, for monkeys in captivity and for children at all times. In the southern portion of the United States it is called a "goober." Lead a pickaninny to a field where he can uproot goobers to his heart's content and supplement his job with a stalk of sugar-cane to suck and you have given him not the necessities of sustenance but the utmost in gastronomic rapture.

English schoolboys call them monkeynuts and one of the unexplainable phenomena of adolescence is the astounding amount of monkeynuts and dannon tarts, washed down with a word concoction of frothy, charged, spiky water known as gingerbeer, which a small boy can consume when he guides a visiting indulgent uncle to a "tuck-shop" within school bounds.

Long may the arachis hypogaea, alias earhnut, alias monkeynut, alias groundnut, alias pistache de terre (in Gallic lands), alias peanut, reign and dance to the merry tune of the pushcart vendor's whistle.

More Truth Than Poetry

FAME

Whenever a dull feudal baron,
Who possessed little wit of his own,
Was keen that acclaim
Should attach to his name
So he might become widely well known,
He employed a bright rhyme-writing minstrel,
(There were many such boys in those days)
A zither to twang
While he busily sang
His thick-witted principal's praise.

The populace eagerly listened
While these venal bards strolled about,
And never demurred
At a word that was heard
As the subsidized epics rang out.
And many a fat-headed noble
Through the years has been widely admired
By the unthinking throng
Just because of the song
That was sung by the minstrel he hired.

However, if one lacks the talent
To waken the cheers of the mob
While it watches him rise,
I believe he is wise
To put some one else on the job.
Fame is a lame howsoever one gets it,
Go and earn it yourself, if you can,
And if you cannot
Don't bewail you're hard lot,
Just employ a publicity man.

Thoughts On Modern Life

By GLENN FRANK

A REVOLUTION IN STANDARDS

One of the most popular commentators on the passing show of public affairs undertook the other day to explore the question of whether the emergency legislation of the Roosevelt regime is effecting a revolution. He came to the conclusion that Roosevelt does not spell Revolution. If we had not been in dire straits last March, he concluded, Congress would not have passed the drastic emergency measures it did. As soon as we become prosperous again he believes Congress will repeal these measures.

The devil is sick, the devil a monk would be; the devil is well, the devil a monk is he! I am aware that a profound insight into the perversity of human nature lies back of this ancient adage. But I do not think, as this commentator evidently does, that the old maxim covers the current case.

It may well be that Congress passed the drastic emergency measure of last March under the counsel of despair. It may well be that powerful pressure toward recession from these particular measures will show up the moment the economic tension lets up. But behind, beneath and beyond any and all of the specific measures shoved through Congress by the Roosevelt leadership a real revolution in standards is going on, in the American mind.

I run all the risks of prophecy and say with confidence that never again in our lifetime will sheer financial accumulation and the display which money can buy bring the prestige it brought in the days behind us. We are at a turn in the road leading to a phase of our maturing national life in which men's prestige will rest more and more upon the social significance of their careers.

Mr. Roosevelt has not caused this change by his precepts, prophetic as they have been. He has but given voice to a change that events themselves have enforced. This change has really come about for the simple reason that the joy has gone out of splurging. I find business men, who a few years ago were riding in extravagantly elaborate foreign cars, today riding in far simpler models, indistinguishable from a hundred and one cars they pass on the streets, not because they cannot still afford the most elaborate automobiles which are lying idle in their garages, but because they feel easier in their minds using the simpler ones. I find women leaving priceless jewels in vaults and going more simply adorned to social functions, not solely or even primarily because they are afraid a gangster might rob them, but because they feel easier in their minds without them. I am sure all this is more than a passing phase of fear. It is the culmination of a revolution in standards.

I repeat: Not within our lifetimes will men and women find joy in splurging while hunger haunts any part of our population. Men of business, industry and finance have heretofore clamored and intrigued for swollen fortune because these were the symbols of power, and men will always hunger for power. The next phase of our evolution will see prestige come to men of business, industry and finance because they have made the economic machine bring increase of life for the millions. The power of the business leader of the future will be the same sort of power that mankind willingly puts into the hands of the great statesman.

It is this spiritual revolution now upon us that will make possible permanent and productive change in the policies and procedures of our economic life. Copyright, 1933, McClure News/r Syn.

KINDNESS

If you would succeed with children be kind to them. That does not mean loading them down with gifts, handing them everything they think they want, making monkeys of them. Spoiling children, giving them false notions about life and themselves in relation to it, is about the most unkind thing you can do to them. A spoiled child has been robbed of his childhood and that is tragic. No, I mean being truly kind to children.

If you want to help a child you must like him. You cannot be kind to him unless you have that warm feeling in your heart for him that makes you wish him well wherever he goes and whatever he does. You like him when he breaks things, you like him when he says what you write to hear him say, you like him when he disappoints you. You can be kind to him without effort then, and that is the only way you can ever be kind to a child. He detects the forced tone and the cool smile and the grudging word. They hurt him. So first, like the child you want to help. If you can't like him get out of his way.

When you like a child you can find it in your heart to forgive his mistakes and praise his good points. At once the child feels your kindness and responds. He will turn to you, to the warmth of your kindly spirit as the flowers turn toward the sun that warms and nourishes them. Then you can say what you want to say to him and he will listen. "I like Miss Abbott. She is kind to me. She tells me when I make a mistake but she doesn't go up in the air about it."

There speaks the child who felt the kindness of the teacher behind her criticisms. He knew she liked him, was for him, as he puts it. The teacher who never spoke to him in the halls, who looked coldly at him when she called him to recite, who said, "As usual," in icy tones when he stumbled in recitations, who called across the study hall, "Take that coat off that seat. You're not the only one in the room, you know," did not like him, was unkind to him, and he knew it and did poorer work for her than for anybody else. You can't be kind to a child you dislike. And he knows it.

Jack was hurrying toward the front door when Norah, the cook, appeared at the side entrance and beckoned him around the back.
